

Teams Search For 3

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — Investigators prepared two teams to make arrests on the San Francisco Peninsula on Wednesday night, reportedly searching for three wealthy young men who may have kidnapped 26 Chowchilla school children and their bus driver for "thrills."

Sheriff's officers told reporters that two teams will go to separate locations to make arrests, but they did not reveal the identity or exact whereabouts of those being sought.

A highly placed source in Alameda County told The Associated Press that one young man sought was connected to the quarry where the captives were held in a makeshift, underground prison before digging their way to freedom. The source said the other two were sons of a prominent San Francisco area physician.

"We have people here that we are looking for and we are waiting for warrants for their arrest to arrive here for Alameda and Madera counties," San Mateo County Sheriff John R. McDonald said.

However, McDonald told a news conference about 3 hours later that "we do not have any warrants on hand at this time."

Published reports on Wednesday said the mysterious abduction may have been the work of "a drug and gun cult" involving members of wealthy families.

"It is a cult situation, a thrill thing involving drugs," said a source quoted in the Oakland Tribune.

The Sacramento Bee and the Fresno Bee also reported that the arrests of several sons of prominent families were imminent.

Sheriff McDonald said authorities from Madera County, where the kidnapping occurred, and Alameda County, where the quarry is located, have come to the San Francisco Peninsula to aid in the investigation.

McDonald also said a search warrant was being prepared in San Mateo County, but he gave no further details.

Also at the news conference were Alameda County Sheriff Tom Houchins and Madera County Sheriff Ed Bates, who issued brief statements but declined to answer questions.

"I'm very annoyed at the media," Houchins said, adding that some news reports were getting in the way of the investigation.

A source told The AP that the families of all three young men being sought have residences on the San Francisco Peninsula, within the jurisdiction of San Mateo County. Redwood City is about 30 miles south of San Francisco.

The search intensified in the peninsula area after clothing and other articles taken from the bus driver by the kidnapers were found near Saratoga, about 20 miles south of Redwood City.

Investigators also discovered that two vans used to transport the kidnap victims from Chowchilla to the Livermore quarry were registered at the Department of Motor Vehicles in Los Gatos. Both Los Gatos and Saratoga are just east of the Santa Cruz Mountains, about 50 miles south of San Francisco.

"The arrests of at least seven sons of wealthy San Francisco Peninsula families are imminent," the Sacramento Bee reported. A similar report was published in its sister newspaper, The Fresno Bee of the McClatchy Group.

Authorities told The Associated Press that they did have suspects but arrests were not imminent.

Both newspapers quoted sources as saying one suspect was indirectly linked to the California Rock and Gravel Co. quarry near Livermore in Alameda County, where the kidnap victims were entombed in a buried moving van for nearly 18 hours last week.

"We are looking very closely to an individual named Fred because the moving van was sold ... to him personally," said a source quoted by The Fresno Bee. "That information has been passed on to the district attorney to see if there is enough for a complaint."

The sources were quoted as saying it would have taken someone with ready access to the quarry to bury a moving van there "with impunity."

Lt. Gene Saper of the Alameda County sheriff's office said earlier that quarry owner Fred Woods III "and his boy are being investigated routinely."

Reached by telephone at California Rock and Gravel's San Francisco office, Woods said, "I'm numb."

Woods, who earlier had confirmed he has a son named Frederick, said Wednesday, "I was told by the sheriff's office not to say whether I have one son or 10 sons."

The busload of school children vanished Thursday on the way home from summer school. The driver and children tunneled their way out of the tomb-like prison where the abductors hid them.

K.C. Park Escapes Bombing

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Worlds of Fun amusement park opened for business Wednesday, but not as usual.

On hand were police and FBI agents who carried out a further search for explosives after finding a bomb device Tuesday that was not rigged to go off. It was not the work of an amateur, police said.

Amusement park officials declined to give a crowd estimate Wednesday. They said that an extortion demand was made, but would not comment when asked if the demand was met. The device, inside a white metal container with several switches showing, was understood to have been located under a bumper car ride in the park's European section.

"At no time was the safety of the guests in jeopardy," said Jack W. Steadman, president of Mid-America Enterprises, operators of the park.

A police spokesman said no connection has been established between the bomb device and discovery of what appeared to be an extortion note on a tree near Gillham Park in midtown Kansas City.

Wheat Harvest May Be Record

Alliance (AP) — A veteran custom harvester from Canada believes he may have harvested a record yield from a wheat field near here.

William Letkeman said he harvested 75.26 bushels per acre from a 130-acre field on the Ray Underwood farm west of here.

Letkeman said he worked the field with two combines, and that he was making frequent unloading stops, keeping the trucks busy all the time.

Letkeman, who owns a wheat farm in Canada, said he started this year's harvest tour at Ames, Ohio, where he cut some wheat that averaged only about five bushels per acre.

Letkeman said the best yield he saw before his stop in Box Butte County was in Kiowa County, Kan., where a field averaged 48 bushels per acre.

Booker Robinson Says Archie 'Like Brother'

By CYNTHIA JOHNSON
Star Staff Writer

Booker L. Robinson, charged with first-degree murder in the Feb. 2 shooting death of Archie Robinson, told the Lancaster County District Court Wednesday that he and the slain man were "like brothers."

Appearing as the final witness in the trial, Booker, 25, said that the handgun he was holding discharged accidentally when Archie made what appeared to be a threatening movement towards him.

The shooting occurred behind an apartment building at 1635 F St. The two Omaha men were not related, but they had been friends for "six or seven years," according to Booker.

Recounting the events which occurred during the day of the shooting, Booker indicated that he and Archie were involved in a sporadically erupting argument over a number of issues.

At one point, he said, Archie threatened to shoot him for not backing him up in an argument with another man.

Under questioning from defense attorney Richard Goos, Booker said he purchased the gun used in the shooting at a pawn shop the afternoon of Feb. 2.

He intended to give the gun to Archie, he said. And he did so.

However, Booker testified that Archie returned the gun to him.

Goos asked Booker if it was true that he had tried "to get away" from Archie on at least two occasions the day of the shooting.

"Yes," Booker responded, "because I didn't want any trouble."

Booker then recalled that Archie followed him to the apartment building at 1635 F, where the on-going argument erupted once again.

Booker said he was in the parking lot, bending over his car — trying to open the trunk with one hand, holding the gun in his other hand — moments before the shooting occurred.

He said Archie, who was standing close by, made a movement which frightened him. And as he (Booker) straightened up and backed away, the gun went off.

Booker said he didn't know the gun discharged until a woman bystander screamed.

He responded in the affirmative when Goos asked him if he was afraid of Archie.

"Did you that day, at any time, intend to hurt Archie Robinson?" Goos asked.

"No," Booker responded.

However, during cross-examination, when Deputy County Atty. Rodney Rehm asked Booker if it was true that he told Archie he was going to kill him, Booker said, "It's possible that I could have made that statement."

Red Planet's Sky Colored Light Blue

Pasadena, Calif. (UPI) — Scientists viewing photographs from Viking 1 discovered Wednesday that ancient astronomers were right — Mars is red.

The first color photograph radioed 214 million miles back to earth from the cold, desolate desert of Mars' Chryse Basin looked as if the three-legged robot had been looking at Arizona's Painted Desert. There even was a light blue sky.

The rusty hues of the unique photograph quickly confirmed scientific speculation that the red planet has had an environment closer to that of earth than the moon.

It was noon on Mars when Viking took the picture and radioed it in the form of three color-filtered images. Scientists electronically formed the color frame much as an artist mixes his pigments.

Dr. Thomas Mutch, head of the photographic experiment, said the reddish tint presumably was caused by the oxidation of iron-rich rocks, apparently at an earlier age when Mars had more oxygen or water in its atmosphere.

Adding to the increasing storehouse of knowledge being gathered by Viking 1 was the discovery Tuesday that the planet has about 3% nitrogen and 1.5% argon in its carbon dioxide-rich atmosphere.

Dr. Michael McElroy of Harvard University said this had important implications for Mars' early history and suggested the planet once had the ingredients necessary for the development of life.

Biologists hope Viking's three life detection experiments will answer the ages-old question of whether life exists on Mars. The first biology data is expected in about three weeks.

After observing the color image, Mutch said, "The odds (of finding life) certainly haven't been going down since Viking landed."

"Isn't that lovely!" Mutch exclaimed when he first saw the color shot on monitors at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

"To me it's most important to see this distinct reddish hue on the surface. This is a surprisingly terrestrial-like desert scene."

Although the soil was red, the rocks littering the landscape had a gray or greenish cast which Mutch said could result from various weathering processes. He said the greenish cast raises some questions because different chemical processes would be involved in producing the two types of minerals.

The color photo was followed by reports from Viking on the planet's weather and "Mars-quake" activity. Two black and white photos came back earlier in the day. Viking sent back its first two shots shortly after landing Tuesday.

A black and white picture stored in the lander's tape recorder and transmitted back early Wednesday showed wind-blown sediment piling against small boulders.

Lower Platte South NRD Tentatively Okays Budget

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

The Lower Platte South Natural Resources District Board unanimously approved Wednesday a tentative $2.6 million budget for fiscal 1976-77.

The record sum represents more than a 78% increase compared to the $1,400,700 budget for the year that ended June 30, as NRD staff member said. However, that was an unrealistic total, exceeded mainly because of unforeseen construction and land rights costs.

The new budget anticipates more exactly what actual costs will be, the staffer said, and it includes a continued maximum property tax levy of one mill, to generate approximately $735,000.

Paul Amen of Lincoln, budget committee head, said the county levy could be reduced slightly, making the board "look like heroes to taxpayers." But he said the directors agreed reducing cash balances as a result would be short-sighted, shirking the board's long-range obligations inherent in NRD planning.

In adopting the proposed budget and expenditures, the NRD board set a public hearing on it, to begin 4 p.m. Aug. 9 in the National Bank of Commerce, Lincoln. Anticipated revenue information listed below will be updated then, after which directors will immediately make final approval.

The NRD encompasses most of Lancaster and Cass Counties, and parts of Seward, Saunders, Butler and Otoe Counties. County treasurers will receive budget data by Aug. 15.

The total budgeted requirement is $2,600,000, including a necessary cash reserve of $372,000. Amen called the package "conservative."

Of the total, project construction for the year ending June 30, 1977, is pegged at $2,017,000. That includes a fiscal 1976 budget overflow of approximately $400,000 in previously committed projects. Operating costs will increase 6.7%, to $153,050. Personnel costs are listed at $112,150.

The total includes reimbursements of $800,000 federal, $31,200 state, and $43,000 Land and Water Conservation Fund, totaling $1,104,200. Thus, to generate the $2,600,000 expense budget minus cash reserves, taxes and other sources must produce $1,179,800.

A more detailed breakdown of anticipated 1977 revenues:

Cash balance carryover, $98,535; investments carryover, $909,55; county treasurer balance, $127,000; federal funds, $979,000; state funds, $61,200; Land and Water Conservation Fund, $43,000; property income, $6,000; investment interest, $18,000. Subtracting $800,000 due other NRDs produces the $1,921,000 revenue total, and adding the $735,000 expected in county-raised taxes balances the $2.6 million budget.

He Can't Behold Just One Picture

To Lincolnite Larry Reed, seeing pictures from Mars has been like eating just one of that certain brand of potato chip.

He can't stop. He wants more ... more pictures and more information.

Reed has a special interest in the Viking 1 mission on Mars. He spent three years working to perfect the cameras and meteorology equipment that are giving earthlings their first sampling of close-up pictures and atmospheric readings from the red planet.

"I must admit," Reed said, "I am surprised at how good the pictures are," considering they're coming from a "mind-boggling" 215 million miles away.

He Can't Behold Just One Picture

Reed said he is frustrated that he missed the opportunity to view firsthand pictures from the equipment he helped design. He resigned his position as test engineer for the prime contractor of the Viking project shortly after his work was completed.

Now he is a graduate student in electrical engineering at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Jury Must Decide Who Is The Real Rice

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Clyde Rice, known in citizens band radio circles as the "Blue Rover," is a quiet man who "lives for his pickup, his CB and his family," defense attorneys concluded Wednesday.

That same man was described by the prosecution as having "a bad temper, a short fuse and low intelligence."

Those two divergent pictures of accused murderer Rice were painted by attorneys as they presented their final arguments to the jury Wednesday. The case was submitted to the seven men and five women at 4:30 p.m. No verdict was reached Wednesday night.

Rice snuffed into a blue bandana as Chief Deputy County Atty. Bernie McGinn accused him of being a "dangerous man despite his appearance at times in this courtroom."

McGinn said Rice, 31, is guilty of first degree murder because he planned to kill another CB-er, Donald Edelman.

When Rice ran over Edelman in the VFW parking lot on the evening of April 10, "it was not an accident," McGinn said.

The two men had battled verbally over the CB airwaves for several months over control of Channel 23, described as "the garbage channel of Lincoln" by one CB-er.

During the trial, the extensive use of CB jargon and "handles" caused the judge, court reporter and attorneys to interrupt testimony for clarification. CB'ers, with nicknames like "Grease Monkey," the "Irish Marine," "Gravel Gerdy" and the "Big T," talked about such things as "giving breaks," "linears" and other "good buddy" talk.

At one point defense attorney Tony Redman told the jury he needed a script to keep the people straight.

"They all have two or three names."

Redman blasted the credibility of several prosecution witnesses and described the entire case as one of the "most incredible ones I've ever seen."

"The case is incredible, the witnesses are incredible, the charge of first degree murder is incredible."

"No one really knows," Redman told the jury, "what really happened in that parking lot."

He said the prosecution's key witness, Rene Swanson, was lying when she told the jury that Rice made seven or eight passes at Edelman in his pickup truck.

Mrs. Swanson, whose CB "handle" is the "Blonde Bomber," was living with Edelman when he was killed. Much of Redman's statements to the jury centered on trying to undercut her testimony.

Redman said Mrs. Swanson testified that Rice "was racing down the parking lot spinning his wheels and yet Bear Tracks (Edelman) doesn't have any bruises on his legs or even have any broken legs."

He noted that police didn't find any "significant skid marks" in the parking lot to indicate that Rice was driving the way Mrs. Swanson said he was.

Redman said that another prosecution witness who was walking into the VFW Club at the time testified he didn't see Mrs. Swanson, who had parked her car in front of the club's entrance.

Redman charged, "My suspicion is that the Blonde Bomber got there just about the time it was all over."

"Doesn't it seem strange to you that the Blonde Bomber was sitting in a car that she said was in running order and didn't drive in front of the speeding truck to stop Rice?"

A defense eyewitness, Ken Dettmann, said he was riding in Rice's pickup and denied that Rice chased Edelman over the VFW parking lot.

McGinn told the jury not to place too much credence in Dettmann's testimony because "Sidekick," as Dettmann was called, "was Clyde's friend."

McGinn said Rice told a neighbor in his trailer court in March that he and Edelman were "having problems."

The neighbor testified that Rice said "he would get Bear Tracks," McGinn said. Waving his pistol at the neighbor, McGinn claimed Rice vowed, "If this gun doesn't get him, this truck would."

"And he kicked the bumper for emphasis," McGinn said of Rice. That conversation proves Rice planned to kill Edelman, McGinn said.

Edelman, the defense maintained, was drunk. And because he "was loaded," as Redman put it, Edelman didn't react quick enough when Rice said he was going to drive his truck home.

Rice told Edelman to "get out of his way," Redman said. Instead, Rice ran over Edelman.

The prosecution didn't deny that Edelman may have been drunk at the time. Several hours after Edelman had been taken to the hospital, his blood alcohol content was .15. The legal limit for intoxication in Nebraska is .10.

Noting that psychiatrists had said Rice was borderline mentally retarded, the defense concluded that even Rice might not know what really happened the night of April 10.

However, Redman argued, Edelman's death was an accident. "The bits of reasonable doubt glare out at you."

Booker Robinson Says Archie 'Like Brother'

By CYNTHIA JOHNSON
Star Staff Writer

Booker L. Robinson, charged with first-degree murder in the Feb. 2 shooting death of Archie Robinson, told the Lancaster County District Court Wednesday that he and the slain man were "like brothers."

Appearing as the final witness in the trial, Booker, 25, said that the handgun he was holding discharged accidentally when Archie made what appeared to be a threatening movement towards him.

The shooting occurred behind an apartment building at 1635 F St. The two Omaha men were not related, but they had been friends for "six or seven years," according to Booker.

Recounting the events which occurred during the day of the shooting, Booker indicated that he and Archie were involved in a sporadically erupting argument over a number of issues.

At one point, he said, Archie threatened to shoot him for not backing him up in an argument with another man.

Under questioning from defense attorney Richard Goos, Booker said he purchased the gun used in the shooting at a pawn shop the afternoon of Feb. 2.

He intended to give the gun to Archie, he said. And he did so.

However, Booker testified that Archie returned the gun to him.

Goos asked Booker if it was true that he had tried "to get away" from Archie on at least two occasions the day of the shooting.

"Yes," Booker responded, "because I didn't want any trouble."

Booker then recalled that Archie followed him to the apartment building at 1635 F, where the on-going argument erupted once again.

Booker said he was in the parking lot, bending over his car — trying to open the trunk with one hand, holding the gun in his other hand — moments before the shooting occurred.

He said Archie, who was standing close by, made a movement which frightened him. And as he (Booker) straightened up and backed away, the gun went off. Booker said he didn't know the gun discharged until a woman bystander screamed.

He responded in the affirmative when Goos asked him if he was afraid of Archie.

"Did you that day, at any time, intend to hurt Archie Robinson?" Goos asked.

"No," Booker responded.

However, during cross-examination, when Deputy County Atty. Rodney Rehm asked Booker if it was true that he told Archie he was going to kill him, Booker said, "It's possible that I could have made that statement."

In its questioning, the prosecution leaned heavily on the argument that Booker had the gun drawn as he left the apartment building and proceeded into the parking lot.

Booker denied that that was true.

He also said, "I'm not sure what I told Mr. Lahners," when Rehm asked him about a statement he gave to County Atty. Ron Lahners following the shooting.

According to Rehm, the statement shows that Booker told Lahners that he "pulled the gun down, pointed it at Archie," and then it discharged.

Closing arguments in the case are scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. Thursday.

Lower Platte South NRD Tentatively Okays Budget

By DICK HOLMAN

The Lower Platte South Natural Resources District Board unanimously approved Wednesday a tentative $2.6 million budget for fiscal 1976-77. The record sum represents more than a 78% increase compared to the $1,488,700 budget for the year that ended June 30, an NRD staff member said. Pasadena, Calif. (UPI) — Scientists viewing photographs from Viking 1 discovered Wednesday that ancient astronomers were right — Mars is red.

The first color photograph radioed 214 million miles back to earth from the cold, desolate desert of Mars' Chryse Basin looked as if the three-legged robot had been looking at Arizona's Painted Desert. There even was a light blue sky.

The rusty hues of the unique photograph quickly confirmed scientific speculation that the red planet has had an environment closer to that of earth than the moon.

It was noon on Mars when Viking took the picture and radioed it in the form of three color-filtered images. Scientists electronically formed the color frame much as an artist mixes his pigments.

Dr. Thomas Mutch, head of the photographic experiment, said the reddish tint presumably was caused by the oxidation of iron-rich rocks, apparently at an earlier age when Mars had more oxygen or water in its atmosphere.

Adding to the increasing storehouse of knowledge being gathered by Viking 1 was the discovery Tuesday that the planet has about 3% nitrogen and 1.5% argon in its carbon dioxide-rich atmosphere.

Dr. Michael McElroy of Harvard University said this had important implications for Mars' early history and suggested the planet once had the ingredients necessary for the development of life.

He Can't Behold Just One Picture

To Lincolnite Larry Reed, seeing pictures from Mars has been like eating just one of that certain brand of potato chip. He can't stop. He wants more ... more pictures and more information.

Reed has a special interest in the Viking I mission on Mars. He spent three years working to perfect the cameras and meteorology equipment that are giving earthlings their first sampling of close-up pictures and atmospheric readings from the red planet.

"I must admit," Reed said, "I am surprised at how good the pictures are," considering they're coming from a "mind-boggling" 215 million miles away.

Reed said he is frustrated that he missed the opportunity to view firsthand pictures from the equipment he helped design. He resigned his position as test engineer for the prime contractor of the Viking project shortly after his work was completed.

Now he is a graduate student in electrical engineering at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Whether he sees the pictures firsthand or on television and in the newspaper, Reed, 33, still is "thrilled at the feeling of getting a job done ... getting it done well."

Senators OK, 91-5, Watergate Reform Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — In its first major legislative response to the Watergate scandal, the Senate voted Wednesday to create a special prosecutor and to bar presidential campaign aides from top Justice Department posts.

With widespread bipartisan support, the so-called Watergate reform bill passed by a roll call vote of 91 to 5. It now goes to the House.

President Ford also had supported the measure, but that was before a provision was added that would prohibit presidents from naming top presidential or vice presidential campaign officials to serve as attorney general or his deputy.

The special prosecutor would be authorized to investigate such scandals as Watergate, which brought on the resignation of former President Richard M. Nixon.

The investigations would include alleged violations of law by the president, vice president, attorney general, FBI director, all other Cabinet officials, federal judges and members of Congress.

The bill also would require high level public officials, including judges and members of Congress as well as administration officials, to file full financial disclosure statements which would be open to public inspection.

Also created by the measure would be an Office of Government Crimes within the Justice Department which would investigate allegations of wrongdoing by all other government officials as well as allegations of violations of lobbying and election laws.

The jurisdictions of the special prosecutor and of the office of government crimes would be separate, and they would have no connection.

The provisions barring campaign officials from serving as attorney general was offered by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., and adopted on a voice vote.

Bentsen said it was time to "assure the American people" that politics had been removed from the operations of the Justice Department.

The special prosecutor would be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. He would serve a single three-year term and could be removed by the President only "for extraordinary improprieties, for malfeasance in office, or for any conduct constituting a felony."

Defections Aid Jobs Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — Aided by key defections from Republican ranks, the Senate on Wednesday overrode President Ford's veto of a $3.95-billion public works jobs bill.

The bill now goes to the House, which is scheduled to vote Thursday and is expected to override.

The vote in the Senate was 73 to 24, eight more than the two-thirds margin necessary to override a presidential veto.

Afterwards, Ford issued a statement saying he deeply regretted the Senate action.

"Both the Senate and I share a keen desire to expand job opportunities for all Americans, but I continue to believe that the wisest, most productive means of reaching that goal is through a steadily growing private sector..." he said.

Ford vetoed the measure July 6. He told Congress the bill "will not create lasting jobs but instead will create more inflation."

He used similar arguments in February when he vetoed a $6.1-billion public works jobs bill. That veto was overridden in the House 328 to 83, but the Senate fell three votes short of the two-thirds margin.

Five Republicans and seven Democrats who had sided with the President in February voted to override Ford's veto of the scaled down version of the jobs bill.

A key Republican who shifted was Sen. Robert P. Griffin of Michigan, who cited unemployment rates of 9.7 per cent statewide and 13.4 per cent in Detroit as his reason for defecting. Griffin, the assistant Republican leader in the Senate, had been instrumental in holding GOP votes in February.

Other Republicans who switched were Sens. Peter Domenici of New Mexico, Hiram Fong of Hawaii, Robert Packwood of Oregon and Robert Taft of Ohio.

Secrets Oozed From House Panel

Washington (UPI) — Security at the House Intelligence Committee was so lax that staff members kept top secret papers in their desks and copied material for their own files, a former committee counsel testified Wednesday.

The description of sieve-like security at the now-defunct panel came during House Ethics Committee hearings into who leaked a secret congressional intelligence report to CBS reporter Daniel Schorr.

The ethics panel went into closed session as soon as the security details came to light, presumably for fear sensitive or embarrassing details might be made public.

During the open session in the morning, James Oliphant, counsel to the intelligence panel, said proper security rules "were not followed" by the panel during its lengthy probe of covert CIA operations late last year and early this year.

"Security was very, very lax," Oliphant said. "People in charge of files did not have any library or any security background. People kept materials in their own desks, including classified material — top secret."

He said some staff members even copied confidential materials on office duplicating machines and put the copies in their own files.

The ethics panel is in the final phases of a $150,000 investigation into who gave Schorr a copy of the Intelligence Committee's final report, a document laced with confidential material and highly critical of CIA covert operations.

The House voted to keep that report secret until President Ford could censor it. Schorr admitted he got a copy from a source he refuses to name and gave it to the Village Voice newspaper of New York City, which published much of it.

B1 Bomber Funds Held Up Until Next Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Appropriations Committee Wednesday approved a $104-billion defense spending bill but voted to hold up funds for the B-1 Bomber until next year.

The total defense spending bill for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, was $3.9 billion below what the White House had requested and $1.4 billion under the figure approved by the House.

The measure contained $1.05 billion for production of three B-1 bombers but the committee voted 13 to 12 to withhold the funds until next February.

Later, at a news conference, Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld called the action "unsound from a cost standpoint and a management standpoint." He said a four-month delay in a production decision could make the Pentagon liable for some higher charges by the contractor.

Higher Energy Prices Hold Inflation Rate Up

Washington (AP) — Grocery prices leveled off in June, but sharply higher prices for gasoline and other energy products prevented any significant improvement in the nation's inflation rate.

The Labor Department reported Wednesday that consumer prices rose 0.5% last month, which amounts to an annual rate on 6%. Prices had gone up 0.6% in May.

However, the June increase provided some encouragement in that it marked the first month since February that prices had not increased faster than the previous month.

President Ford's chief spokesman, Ron Nessen, noted the increase was "about what was expected." He said it "falls right into the forecast" that inflation this year would rise between 5.5 and 6%. Prices rose 7% in 1975.

Ford is counting on a strong economic recovery and an easing of inflation to improve his election chances in November. The price report followed Tuesday's announcement that economic growth slowed sharply this spring, with the nation's total output rising at less than half the rapid pace of last winter. The slowdown, while expected, was sharper than anticipated.

The Labor Department report showed grocery prices, after climbing rapidly in April and May, rose only 0.2% last month. But this favorable news was offset by a 1.9% jump in energy prices, which accounted for nearly a third of the over-all June increase.

At the pump, gasoline prices rose 2.7% last month following an increase of 1.5% in May. Regular grade gasoline averaged 59.2 cents a gallon nationally, while premium averaged 63.7 cents per gallon.

Prices also were up sharply for coal, natural gas, fuel oil and electricity.

The average worker's paycheck also shrank in June, owing to both inflation and a decline in weekly hours worked.

After subtracting taxes from earnings and taking inflation into account, the Labor Department figured real spendable earnings declined 0.9% last month.

Consumer prices were up 5.9% over the past 12 months, with the consumer price index standing at 170.1 in June. That meant it cost $170.10 to purchase the same variety of goods and services that sold for $100 in the 1967 base period.

City Frowns On Tree House

Tampa, Fla. (UPI) — St. Elmo Miller, a 59-year-old plumber, pipefitter and welder, says he's willing to go to jail to protect his right to build a tree house for his two young daughters.

Miller, who doesn't trust sending his girls to neighborhood parks, turned his backyard into a fancy playground with a Trampoline, a swing set and climbing bars.

He also has plans to build a ferris wheel, merry-go-round and a log flume ride. That is if he isn't in jail, which is where he says he is willing to go rather than purchase a city building permit for the tree house he built for Lorraine, 6, and Michelle, 3.

The tree house is not your ordinary, run-of-the-mill tree house and city officials contend it is not a toy but a building worth more than $100. They filed a misdemeanor charge against Miller for failure to purchase a $12 building permit.

Miller pleaded innocent and asked for a non-jury trial, which is scheduled Aug. 17.

"A tree house is a play house," Miller said.

The controversial tree house is a two-story work of art and its shingled exterior is more attractive than Miller's house. A 57-step spiral staircase made of welded iron pipe curls its way up the 25 feet to the tree house.

Academy Reinstates Women

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Merchant Marine Academy has reinstated a female cadet who resigned after being caught in bed with her fiancé, another cadet at the Kings Points, N.Y., academy, Sen. J. Glenn Beall, R-Md., said Wednesday.

Nancy Donnelly of Oxon Hill, Md., has said she was pressured into resigning while her fiancé went on to be graduated.

The academy said the incident took place in March and that Miss Donnelly resigned May 17. The man was not disciplined because he could not be identified and the woman declined to name him at the time, a spokesman for the academy said.

Beall demanded an explanation from the school in June.

"I am pleased that the Maritime Administration has today confirmed the reinstatement of one of my constituents to the Merchant Marine Academy," Beall said. "Miss Donnelly will be returning to classes next month."

USDA To Buy Hamburger

Washington (UPI) — Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz said Wednesday his department will begin immediately to buy hamburger — probably including some produced from choice and prime grade cattle — to help bolster sagging cattle prices.

Butz' action came on the heels of appeals from cattlemen and Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., who urged that the government step into the market because many producers are losing money at current prices. Curtis said consumers might face beef shortages later if the low cattle prices continued to discourage future production.

An Agriculture Dept. survey of cattle feeding July 19, meanwhile, had noted that supplies of high grade grain-fed beef would remain heavy for several months but may decline this fall.

Butz said this was a "very opportune time" for government purchases.

Red Cross Fails To Get Wounded Out Of Besieged Camp

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — First elements of an Arab League peacekeeping force moved into position along Beirut's dangerous "green line" Wednesday, but a new attempt by the International Red Cross to evacuate wounded from a besieged refugee camp ended in failure.

Gunfire from Christian militiamen shattered the limited cease-fire called at the Tal Zaatar camp, forcing a two-man Red Cross team to pull out of the area and canceling a planned convoy to bring out 100 of the camp's 1,000 wounded Palestinians.

Two previous attempts to remove wounded from the camp, which has been under attack by the Christians for almost a month, also failed.

The Saudi Arabian convoy of armored cars, its machine guns covered in canvas, ran into heavy shelling when it began moving into the no man's land between the Moslem and Christian sections of Beirut. But the Saudis continued setting up positions to separate the warring factions.

"There always are some people who are against any sort of settlement or agreement," said Dr. Hassan Sabry Kholl, the Egyptian chief mediator for the Arab League. "After 16 months, some incidents are to be expected in the first days."

Plans call for the Arab League forces to continue deployment along the green line separating the Moslem and Christian sectors in Beirut to end the shooting and make it easier to move from one side of the city to the other. They are also to reopen the road to Beirut's international airport and the airport itself.

An official of Middle East Airlines, Lebanon's national airline, said the airport could be operating two days after the road is secured.

delegation here, said after his third failure in efforts to evacuate wounded from Tal Zaatar that "it is impossible to be disappointed any more in Lebanon."

But he said that if another cease-fire was called, the Red Cross would try again.

Two Swiss members of the Red Cross team, Dr. Pascal Grelety and Bernard Mossaz, advanced to within a few hundred yards of the camp in a white car carrying a large Red Cross flag. They were to enter the camp and determine if the convoy could be brought in.

Hoefliger said they made three attempts to move to the camp gates but each time, "there was shooting." He said the gunfire was directed at the camp, not at the team.

A Christian military radio which had given orders to stop firing reported the Red Cross team was approaching the camp, and a voice on the radio asked,

"Are they being shot at? I hope they are being shot at. We don't want them to get some wounded, we want a mass evacuation."

Hoefliger said later that the two men were able to get close enough to the camp to see that the last 750 yards of road was strewn with so much debris and wreckage that trucks could not go through. He said a convoy could not get through without a bulldozer to clear the way.

Radio reports said there was heavy fighting in the mountains east of Beirut, near the resort towns of Aley and Kahhaleh, and in the north, between leftist-held Tripoli and the Christian town of Zagharta.

The reports did not say if the fighting was between the Lebanese Moslems and Christians or between the Syrians and the combined Lebanese leftist-Palestinian forces.

Syria has a reported 13,000 troops in Lebanon in an attempt to halt the fighting. Even though they are also mostly Moslems, the Syrians have been attacking the Palestinians in an attempt to force them to accept a Syrian-sponsored cease-fire.

Moslem-controlled Beirut radio said Farouk Kad-douni, a political officer of the Palestine Liberation Organization, left for Damascus on Wednesday with Libyan Premier Abdul Salam Jalloud. Jalloud has been serving as a mediator between the Palestinians and Syria.

The Middle East News Agency reported in Cairo that Syria has executed 10 Syrian air force pilots for refusing orders to attack Moslem positions in Lebanon.

In Israel, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin denied that Israel was involved in the Lebanese war and said it would not intervene unless its security was threatened.

British Ambassador To Ireland Murdered

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Terrorists exploded a land mine under the Jaguar limousine of the British ambassador to Ireland Wednesday morning, killing him and a woman secretary and seriously wounding Britain's top civil servant in Northern Ireland.

Ambassador Christopher Ewart-Biggs, 54, and Judith Cook, 27, were killed just after the car swept through the gates of the ambassador's residence in the Dublin suburb of Sandymount en route to an appointment with Irish Foreign Minister Garret Fitzgerald.

Brian Cubbon, 47, the man responsible for implementing direct British rule in the strife-torn province north of here, was injured as was the chauffeur, Brian O'Driscoll. Both men were in critical condition.

The bomb, believed detonated by remote control, blew the car into the air and made a crater in the road 10 feet deep. The car landed on its roof in the hole, trapping the four occupants, police said.

No one claimed responsibility, but Irish Justice Minister Patrick Cooney said the terrorists were believed to be "an extremist republican group." He announced a $36,000 reward for their capture.

Cooney did not specify the outlawed Irish Republican Army, which is fighting a guerrilla war to end British rule in Northern Ireland and unite it with the Irish republic.

Police arrested two IRA leaders, David O'Connell and Joe O'Neill, after an IRA funeral later Wednesday, but that appeared connected to a scuffle during the funeral.

Irish Prime Minister Liam Cosgrave said his government viewed the killings "with shock and revulsion." Irish officials canceled their attendance at public functions and ordered flags lowered to half-staff.

A spokesman for Queen Elizabeth II, who is in Canada after opening the Montreal Olympics, said the British monarch was "shocked and distressed" and has sent messages of condolence to the bereaved families and sympathetic messages to the injured.

British Prime Minister James Callaghan told the House of Commons in London "These killers are no friends of anyone. They are the common enemy we must destroy or be destroyed by."

Reagan Bulwark May Fall

Washington — The Mississippi delegation to the Republican National Convention, long regarded as a bulwark of Ronald Reagan's candidacy, was reported Wednesday to be on the verge of a shift to President Ford. Clarke Reed, Mississippi Republican chairman, says it is "conceivable" that a majority in the delegation will ultimately endorse the President. Ford spokesman says he is confident of such a move within a week. Such a reversal would be a severe, and perhaps final, blow to the Reagan effort.

Westinghouse Investigated

Washington — The Westinghouse Electric Corp. is again under investigation by the Securities and Exchange Commission for a suspected failure to make proper disclosures of its operations to stockholders. The agency has been conducting an informal inquiry into how the company went about informing more than two dozen utilities last September that it would be unable to make deliveries of uranium because soaring prices made it economically impractical. An SEC official says the investigation is now being taken "off the back burner."

American To Be Released

Belgrade, Yugoslavia — Yugoslav authorities have made it known they plan to release on Friday an American citizen, Laszlo Toth, imprisoned a year ago on espionage charges.

French Pay Outpaces Prices

Paris — During the economic crisis of the last three years, France has been the only major industrial democracy where wage rises have outpaced price increases. This has been one of the keys to relative industrial peace and political stability in a country with a history of periodic social eruptions.

Lockheed Makes $1 Billion Sale

OTTAWA, Canada (AP) — Canada signed a $1 billion contract Wednesday to buy 18 Orion patrol planes from Lockheed Aircraft Corp. It was the largest peacetime military deal in Canadian history and the largest international sale ever made by Lockheed, officials said.

Lockheed was chosen to supply planes to replace Canada's aging Argus patrol craft last year, despite the company's financial problems and the international scandals over payoffs by Lockheed to foreign government officials to promote sales of its aircraft. The agreement contains an assurance that, as far as can be determined, there was no impropriety in Lockheed's dealings with Canada.

The news boosted Lockheed shares on the New York stock market up 37 1/2 cents to $11.

Agreement on a contract was originally announced in May, but Lockheed failed to raise the $375 million from Canadian banks needed to finance the first year of that pact. Under the new contract, the company will need only $50 million at any one time. Lockheed officials said the company will have no problem raising the amount from the consortium of 24 American banks which are its creditors.

Company officials in Burbank, Calif., do not plan to step up hiring or bring back employees laid off earlier for production of the 18 planes, said Dave Crowder, public relations director for Lockheed-California Co. in Burbank, Calif.

"It's not going to have a dramatic effect on our work force," he said. "The effect will be quite modest really."

Canada promptly renamed its new plane the Aurora — "after the distinctive feature of the Canadian North, the aurora borealis" — northern lights in the arctic sky, said Canadian Defense Minister James Richardson. He said the plane will be the best antisubmarine aircraft in the world.

Amin Releases Hijacked French Jet

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ugandan President Idi Amin released "without conditions" the Air France jetliner hijacked to Uganda last month and asked the French ambassador to have the plane flown out, Uganda radio reported Wednesday.

Amin had demanded payment for the plane's release, but Wednesday he called French Ambassador Pierre Renard and told him to arrange for it to be flown out of the country, according to the Uganda broadcast monitored here.

In Paris, Air France officials said company technicians were working on the plane that had been hit by bullets during the Israeli raid.

The Ugandan leader also sent a telegram to Kenya promising not to invade that country and to stop anti-Kenya propaganda, the broadcast said.

"I wish to request that we forget our differences and to assure you that from now on you will not hear any propaganda against you and your government from Uganda," the station said the telegram read.

Red Cross Fails To Get Wounded Out Of Besieged Camp

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — First elements of an Arab League peacekeeping force moved into position along Beirut's dangerous "green line" Wednesday, but a new attempt by the International Red Cross to evacuate wounded from a besieged refugee camp ended in failure.

Gunfire from Christian militiamen shattered the limited cease-fire called at the Tal Zaatar camp, forcing a two-man Red Cross team to pull out of the area and canceling a planned convoy to bring out 100 of the camp's 1,000 wounded Palestinians.

Two previous attempts to remove wounded from the camp, which has been under attack by the Christians for almost a month, also failed.

The Saudi Arabian convoy of armored cars, its machine guns covered in canvas, ran into heavy shelling when it began moving into the no man's land between the Moslem and Christian sections of Beirut. But the Saudis continued setting up positions to separate the warring factions.

"There always are some people who are against any sort of settlement or agreement," said Dr. Hassan Sabry Kholi, the Egyptian chief mediator for the Arab League. "After 16 months, some incidents are to be expected in the first days."

Plans call for the Arab League forces to continue deployment along the green line separating the Moslem and Christian sectors in Beirut to end the shooting and make it easier to move from one side of the city to the other. They are also to reopen the road to Beirut's international airport and the airport itself.

An official of Middle East Airlines, Lebanon's national airline, said the airport could be operating two days after the road is secured.

delegation here, said after his third failure in efforts to evacuate wounded from Tal Zaatar that "it is impossible to be disappointed any more in Lebanon."

But he said that if another cease-fire was called, the Red Cross would try again.

Two Swiss members of the Red Cross team, Dr. Pascal Greletty and Bernard Mossaz, advanced to within a few hundred yards of the camp in a white car carrying a large Red Cross flag. They were to enter the camp and determine if the convoy could be brought in.

Hoefliger said they made three attempts to move to the camp gates but each time, "there was shooting." He said the gunfire was directed at the camp, not at the team.

A Christian military radio which had given orders to stop firing reported the Red Cross team was approaching the camp, and a voice on the radio asked:

"Are they being shot at? I hope they are being shot at. We don't want them to get some wounded, we want a mass evacuation."

Hoefliger said later that the two men were able to get close enough to the camp to see that the last 750 yards of road was strewn with so much debris and wreckage that trucks could not go through. He said a convoy could not get through without a bulldozer to clear the way.

Radio reports said there was heavy fighting in the mountains east of Beirut, near the resort towns of Aley and Kahhaleh, and in the north, between leftist-held Tripoli and the Christian town of Zagharta.

The reports did not say if the fighting was between the Lebanese Moslems and Christians or between the Syrians and the combined Lebanese leftist-Palestinian forces.

Syria has a reported 13,000 troops in Lebanon in an attempt to halt the fighting. Even though they are also mostly Moslems, the Syrians have been attacking the Palestinians in an attempt to force them to accept a Syrian-sponsored cease-fire.

Moslem-controlled Beirut radio said Farouk Kadoumi, a political officer of the Palestine Liberation Organization, left for Damascus on Wednesday with Libyan Premier Abdul Salam Jalloud. Jalloud has been serving as a mediator between the Palestinians and Syria.

The Middle East News Agency reported in Cairo that Syria has executed 10 Syrian air force pilots for refusing orders to attack Moslem positions in Lebanon.

In Israel, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin denied that Israel was involved in the Lebanese war and said it would not intervene unless its security was threatened.

British Ambassador To Ireland Murdered

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Terrorists exploded a land mine under the Jaguar limousine of the British ambassador to Ireland Wednesday morning, killing him and a woman secretary and seriously wounding Britain's top civil servant in Northern Ireland.

Ambassador Christopher Ewart-Biggs, 54, and Judith Cook, 27, were killed just after the car swept through the gates of the ambassador's residence in the Dublin suburb of Sandymount en route to an appointment with Irish Foreign Minister Garret Fitzgerald.

Brian Cubbon, 47, the man responsible for implementing direct British rule in the strife-torn province north of here, was injured as was the chauffeur, Brian O'Driscoll. Both men were in critical condition.

The bomb, believed detonated by remote control, blew the car into the air and made a crater in the road 10 feet deep. The car landed on its roof in the hole, trapping the four occupants, police said.

Amin Releases Hijacked French Jet

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ugandan President Idi Amin released "without conditions" the Air France jetliner hijacked to Uganda last month and asked the French ambassador to have the plane flown out, Uganda radio reported Wednesday.

Amin also sent a telegram to Kenyan President Jomo Kenyatta asking him to "forget our differences," the broadcast said. Amin impounded the French Airbus after a July 4 Israeli commando raid on Entebbe airport freed more than 100 hostages held by the pro-Palestinian group that hijacked the plane.

Amin had demanded payment for the plane's release, but Wednesday he called French Ambassador Pierre Renard and told him to arrange for it to be flown out of the country, according to the Uganda broadcast monitored here.

Knowledge Is Exciting

If you had to select the most exciting and most satisfying thing in the world, and if you thought carefully enough about your answer, you might come up with "knowledge." Knowledge or understanding, as the U.S. spacecraft landing on Mars demonstrates, is at least as stimulating as it is acquired as any other activity or experience.

Witness, if you please, the verbal superlatives of the scientists and informed observers at the Viking I control center in California. As the Mars craft returned to earth pictures of the planet's landscape, the reaction was one of awe, astonishment, wonder and excitement.

"There are tears in my eyes, my heart is beating fast... It's mind-boggling," said Noel Hinners, associate administrator of the nation's space agency. From 213 million miles away, Viking I was transmitting amazingly detailed pictures of Mars.

We do not pretend to have a well-informed idea of what went into this Mars success. The technology of the thing is something that one without the appropriate expertise simply is not going to comprehend.

But there is no question that the Mars experiment greatly expands man's field of knowledge and will further enable society to understand itself and, therefore, better chart its future. It is this understanding, in all areas of human endeavor, that adds spice to life.

It is knowledge that paves the way to progress and achievement. It is understanding of people, systems, institutions and academic disciplines that forms the framework of an improved way of life for all people.

This is how the problems of society are solved, how we unlock the secrets that help us smooth the paths that have long troubled us. This is how we find the solutions that have evaded us in our search for a more rewarding and equal opportunity for everyone.

Failure really is not inherent in anything. When we fail at some endeavor, it is only because we do not sufficiently understand the forces with which we are trying to deal.

This is why the Mars landing is so exciting, aside from the merits of that program itself. Once again, it demonstrates to us the capacity of the human race to constantly exceed its past performance and, thereby provide such hope and confidence in the future.

The Mars effort, as a source of new knowledge in and of itself and as an example to be emulated throughout our affairs, will pay us handsome dividends.

Money Bag Empty

For reasons we find increasingly difficult to understand, we have never favored artificial limits on governmental appropriations, or spending. In theory, they are not a good and valid method of administration and they damage our concept of the representative form of government.

But in the case of Lancaster County, we find ourselves not at all upset over a mill levy ceiling that is forcing county commissioners to make wrenching decisions to cut departmental budgets. Not that the county is any worse than any other governmental subdivision, but it is one of the few now facing a critical budget crunch.

What makes us like the levy limit is the fact that it is forcing the board to consider spending plans just as you and I have to do. It has to look at the planned expenditure for new carpeting and say that, while such would be nice, we simply can't afford it.

It has to look at new furnishings, new personnel, new programs and a lot of other things that would be nice and may have some merit, but which there is no money to pay for. When the taxpayer has no money, he doesn't buy things.

But too many governmental units are buying things and simply making the taxpayer cough up. The county is reportedly paying some $10,000 for a group of employees to park downtown. Why not eliminate the $10,000 and let the employees find parking on their own hook and at their own expense?

This week, the 12-county Mid-Nebraska Community Mental Health Center board approved an eight percent increase in the 1976-77 budget. Walt Stull, the board's finance committee chairman, said the reason the budget was increased while the local share of funding remained nearly the same was that the state increased its funding.

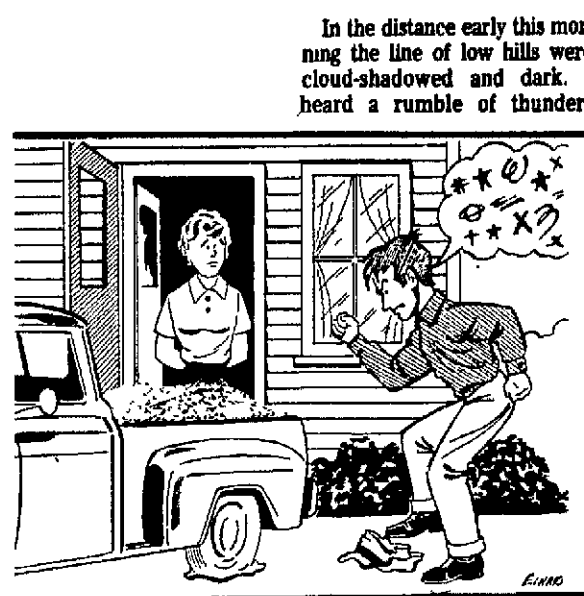

Now, we know the crux of that matter is whether the state funding increase was valid or not but we wonder if a lot of budgets are not increased simply because the money for it is to easy to come by. It is very easy to spend someone else's money, which all governmental bodies do.

We noticed several Lincoln School District Board members who wondered aloud if the district's budget was high enough. We wonder if these individuals ever wonder if their personal budgets are high enough. We doubt it.

We don't believe in a budgetary meat-ax approach, nor do we favor extreme fiscal conservatism, but when the money is tough to come by, it's not nearly as easy to spend.

Patchwork Prairie Country

Rain! What a joy it would be to write of a rain storm in my column this week. I would tell of the silver slanting rain needles piercing the earth, the cool freshness that follows and the mud-filled puddles.

Before I sat down to write, the quick shower of rain had come and gone. It dried on the walks in minutes, too scant an amount to measure.

This must have been the thirty per cent chance of rain that the weatherman predicted. I told a lady yesterday we needed at least a ninety per cent odds in our favor before we could expect to get a rain. "Yes, and then that would evaporate before it hit the ground," she added.

The wheat harvest has come and gone for another year without much fanfare. As usual there is always some extra work that adds to the stress of the day. The Farmer had filled the pickup with wheat and planned to haul it to the elevator the next morning. About a hundred bushels stood on the truck overnight. With the addition of sideboards he put on the truck, it is capable of holding more grain.

When the morning arrived, a tire had gone down. To change a tire with a load of grain on the truck complicates the task somewhat. He had put a couple of jacks under the back axle of the truck overnight to forestall such a mishap but a nail in a tire disregards such measures.

This morning I watched a bumble-bee outside my window work diligently on the tall stalks of the snapdragons. It flew from one floret to another, tripping the tight-lipped flowers, crawling inside to partake of the nectar, then flying to another to repeat the process before flying away with a loud buzz. Before becoming air-borne there were several clumsy attempts to take off like a jumbo jet overloaded.

All morning it has been coming and going. The petunias blooming nearby seem to attract little attention from the bumble-bee. I am surprised for it is the petunias that have such a heady flower scent. Perhaps they have been visited by other insects and drained of their nectar.

Picturesque Portraits I would like to frame for the keeping:

The delicate eager beauty of Queen Anne's Lace nodding its flat-topped clusters to the wind.

The stillness of a sun-warmed thicket beside a country roadway from which a brown thrush darts with flitting tail.

Spider-webs like fairy tablecloths stretched upon the grass near my front door.

Little girls turning hollyhocks into ladies with red velvet skirts. A tree-lined stream that divides the low hills undulating away into the distance.

Tame white ducks bobbing and dipping in an irrigation ditch.

A woodpecker dazling the morning with its banner display of white, black and scarlet as it flits with wild vitality to a nearby tree.

The line of low purple hills against a sunset sky.

Little boys who busy themselves building cardboard houses where they can sit in secret abode while the world goes by.

Hints of pale blue light behind the pillow-banked clouds that build in the west.

A farmer watching the weather turn, feeling the cooler wind upon his brow.

MARQUIS
CHILDS

Glimpses Of The Real Carter

NEW YORK — As hardened as one can become through years in this business of columning, there is always room for a sur-had given him a lift from obscurity.

We were talking about issues and, as I recall it, specifically about full employment.

"When will you surface that, Governor?" I asked.

Solemnly, without a trace of the familiar grin, he replied: "Well, you see, I'm saving that for my inaugural address."

I thought this must be a joke. Not for the speech in next week's primary? Not for his acceptance speech when he was nominated by his party?

Not at all. The peanut farmer from Plains, Ga., was in dead earnest. His step-by-step plans, carefully formulated and rarely disclosed to any but the intimate members of his staff, envisaged this ultimate step of the path of office for the presidency. And I do not doubt that he knew very well at that point what he meant to say in assuming the office.

Now that the nomination is an accomplished fact with the demonstration of how well he could keep the secret of his choice of Sen. Walter Mondale for vice presidency, Carter's stern decision-making quality is coming to the fore. The analogy with Richard Nixon is being suggested: a loner driven by ruthless ambition, surrounded by a handful of associates to whom he delegates faceless authority.

In my opinion, it is far too early to reach any such conclusion. Certainly it took all the drive and the stamina to get to where Carter is today just as it took the incessant criss-crossing of the state of Georgia, shaking 800,000 hands, to win the governorship in 1970 after his crushing defeat four years earlier.

Many have found it difficult to work with Carter. Failure to match his standards can bring a cold rebuff, the anger that shows in those ice-blue eyes. Present and past associates have been talking about these traits.

Ironically, in view of his criticism of the Lame-Ranger style in the conduct of foreign policy, a parallel that comes to mind is Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, who drives his closest associates to the brink with his demands.

In his Jack-and-the-Beanstalk career, Carter has had few close friends. One of the few is Charles Kirbo, the Atlanta lawyer, whose wise counsel was invaluable in the Georgia phase of his career.

While he said he consulted with perhaps 40 persons about his choice for vice president, it is a good guess that Kirbo was one of the few with roots in Carter's past based on mutual respect. Incidentally, while he had been advertised as anti-Washington, the way he kept the secret of his choice was evidence of his understanding of Washington ways.

If he had told in advance only three or four persons around him, the secret would surely have leaked. By saving it, he kept the speculation going in a convention that tended otherwise to be ritualistic and dull.

The Republican strategists will hammer away on the alleged duality of the Carter personality. It was a favorite line of attack on Nixon: Will the real Richard Nixon please stand up? The intimation was that no reality existed back of the skillful facade of the seasoned — and ruthlessly ambitious — politician.

Will the real Jimmy Carter please stand up? Is it the twice-born Baptist who can preach, love and compassion with true fervor? Or is it the tough relentless office-seeker with a pious front of "religiosity"? In my opinion, the duality is false. Like every man with a driving ambition, Carter is a complex personality. Being a loner is almost a prerequisite to success in the toughest of all games.

It may sound odd to compare the peanut farmer with the president of Princeton University but a close parallel at this moment is with Woodrow Wilson. Wilson was, in his own way, deeply religious.

Carter's meticulous thought processes, his careful deliberation, his knowledge of just where he wants to go and how compare with the same qualities in Wilson. The presidency is a long gamble and the nomination of Carter is a first step in the greatest of those gambles.

prise and I think the following personal anecdote is relevant to the man who will run for president on the Democratic ticket.

It was my first face-to-face meeting with Jimmy Carter. My recollection is that it was some time in late February or March after the New Hampshire primary and the Iowa caucuses

One White Knight, Slightly Soiled

WASHINGTON — Commerce Secretary Elliot Richardson, the White Knight of the Republican Party, has fallen off his charger.

Richardson is the former attorney general who assumed heroic status two years ago when he refused a White House order to dismiss Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox and got himself fired for his courage. This earned Richardson a reputation for integrity that has now made him a vice presidential prospect. His presence on the ticket, his supporters contend, would help to defuse the Watergate issue.

The scandal has rocked the world, embarrassing governments from Italy to Japan. It has also produced some red faces in corporate board rooms.

The Commerce Dept., which Richardson now heads, usually has shown great sympathy and understanding for the corporate moguls with whom it deals. Swayed perhaps by his new environment, Richardson has written a letter to Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., attacking the SEC.

The SEC was operating on "tenuous legal grounds," he charged during the bribery investigation. Therefore, he opposed legislation that would give the SEC a major role in probing corporate payoffs.

The original drafts of Richardson's letter, we have learned, contained even stronger criticism of the SEC. But cooler heads on the task force staff persuaded him to edit out the harsh language.

In the backrooms of the SEC, meanwhile, the Richardson letter has had a demoralizing effect. The SEC happens to be one of the few federal agencies that has resisted political pressure and has investigated powerful corporations fearfully. Over 100 corporations have been investigated on bribery charges. SEC chairman Roderick Hills returned Richardson's fire with a sizzling letter calling Richardson's remarks "unfounded, inappropriate and ill-timed." This carried extra impact because the two men have been close friends. Indeed, Richardson was responsible for bringing Hills and his wife, Carla, to Washington.

When Richardson was attorney general, he offered Carla a job at the Justice Dept. When he was defense secretary, he offered a Pentagon position to Roderick. Richardson also supported Carla Hills for the Cabinet. She is now secretary of housing and urban development.

Richardson has apologized for the strong language he used against the SEC. But he still wants to exclude the SEC from a major role in curbing foreign bribery.

Footnote: Richardson told in his criticism of the SEC was intended strictly as a legal argument. As for the criticism by his colleagues, he said: "I wish they would tell me those things to my face."

The epic struggle for the Republican presidential nomination is so close that Ronald Reagan's aides may resort to stealing delegates away from President Ford.

Some delegates are bound by law to support the President at least on the first ballot. Their votes belong to Ford, but their hearts belong to Reagan.

In secret strategy sessions, Reagan aides have toyed with the idea of asking these delegates to obtain as long as their state laws require them to honor the primary verdicts. This would prevent the President from ringing up an early-ballot victory. Then, in subsequent ballots, they could legally switch to Reagan.

For example, Ford won 25 delegates in North Carolina and 19 in Kentucky. In both states, they are obliged to vote for Ford only on the first ballot. The President's five Nevada delegates must vote for him on the first two ballots.

The Reagan strategists believe they could pirate several Ford delegates from these three states. If the delegates would sit out the first ballot or two, Reagan could wind up with their votes.

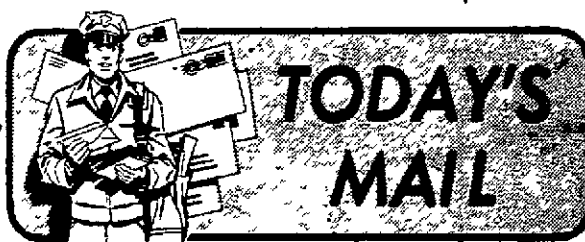

We discussed this plot with the President's political aides, who seemed concerned that it might succeed. They conceded that most of the Kentucky, Nevada and North Carolina delegates, who are legally committed to Ford, are really "Reagan men."

They might hold out on Ford and cast their ballots later for Reagan, the presidential aides acknowledged. The plot is an "immoral attempt to disenfranchise the voters," declared one Ford official.

To counter the move, the President's forces may ask the Republican National Committee to adopt a convention resolution compelling each state delegation to honor the primary results. The committee, since it is stacked with friends of Ford, might be able to block the Reagan strategy.

Sources inside the Reagan camp, meanwhile, acknowledged that the delegate-stealing scheme hasn't been abandoned.

Lincoln, Neb. Why, oh, why must we citizens of Lincoln put up with the noise of unmuffled vehicles? There are three city ordinances on these noisy vehicles and one on disturbing the peace. There are also state laws, yet vehicles can pass the state inspection tests with straight through mufflers. How? I don't know.

Some of these vehicles' owners love to show how much noise they can make by peeling rubber for nearly a block, while their engines bellow so loud they can be heard for half a mile. And at 3.15 a.m.! They're crazy, or maybe I am, for living in Lincoln.

I see the police riding by with their cars closed up, air-conditioners on, no doubt, and radio playing so they don't hear the noise.

I've been told by out-of-town people that our city is the noisiest of any they have ever been in. Great honor for our city. Too bad such a beautiful city as ours is so contaminated with noise. Too bad that we can't all be wealthy enough to have air-conditioned homes so we could tune out the noise and air pollution of that almighty necessity, the automobile.

Knowledge Is Exciting

If you had to select the most exciting and most satisfying thing in the world, and if you thought carefully enough about your answer, you might come up with "knowledge." Knowledge or understanding, as the U.S. spacecraft landing on Mars demonstrates, is at least as stimulating as it is acquired as any other activity or experience.

Witness, if you please, the verbal superlatives of the scientists and informed observers at the Viking I control center in California. As the Mars craft returned to earth pictures of the planet's landscape, the reaction was one of awe, astonishment, wonder and excitement.

"There are tears in my eyes, my heart is beating fast... It's mind-boggling," said Noel Hinners, associate administrator of the nation's space agency. From 213 million miles away, Viking I was transmitting amazingly detailed pictures of Mars.

We do not pretend to have a well-informed idea of what went into this Mars success. The technology of the thing is something that one without the appropriate expertise simply is not going to comprehend.

But there is no question that the Mars experiment greatly expands man's field of knowledge and will further enable society to understand itself and, therefore, better chart its future. It is this understanding, in all areas of human endeavor, that adds spice to life.

It is knowledge that paves the way to progress and achievement. It is understanding of people, systems, institutions and academic disciplines that forms the framework of an improved way of life for all people.

This is how the problems of society are solved, how we unlock the secrets that help us smooth the paths that have long troubled us. This is how we find the solutions that have evaded us in our search for a more rewarding and equal opportunity for everyone.

Failure really is not inherent in anything. When we fail at some endeavor, it is only because we do not sufficiently understand the forces with which we are trying to deal.

This is why the Mars landing is so exciting, aside from the merits of that program itself. Once again, it demonstrates to us the capacity of the human race to constantly exceed its past performance and thereby provide such hope and confidence in the future.

The Mars effort, as a source of new knowledge in and of itself and as an example to be emulated throughout our affairs, will pay us handsome dividends.

Money Bag Empty

For reasons we find increasingly difficult to understand, we have never favored artificial limits on governmental appropriations or spending. In theory, they are not a good and valid method of administration and they damage our concept of the representative form of government.

But in the case of Lancaster County, we find ourselves not at all upset over a mill levy ceiling that is forcing county commissioners to make wrenching decisions to cut departmental budgets. Not that the county is any worse than any other governmental subdivision, but it is one of the few now facing a critical budget crunch.

What makes us like the levy limit is the fact that it is forcing the board to consider spending plans just as you and I have to do. It has to look at the planned expenditure for new carpeting and say that, while such would be nice, we simply can't afford it.

It has to look at new furnishings, new personnel, new programs and a lot of other things that would be nice and may have some merit but which there is no money to pay for. When the taxpayer has no money, he doesn't buy things.

But too many governmental units are buying things and simply making the taxpayer cough up. The county is reportedly paying some $10,000 for a group of employees to park downtown. Why not eliminate the $10,000 and let the employees find parking on their own hook and at their own expense?

This week, the 12-county Mid-Nebraska Community Mental Health Center board approved an eight percent increase in the 1976-77 budget. Walt Stull, the board's finance committee chairman, said the reason the budget was increased while the local share of funding remained nearly the same was that the state increased its funding.

Now, we know the crux of that matter is whether the state funding increase was valid or not but we wonder if a lot of budgets are not increased simply because the money for it is to easy to come by. It is very easy to spend someone else's money, which all governmental bodies do.

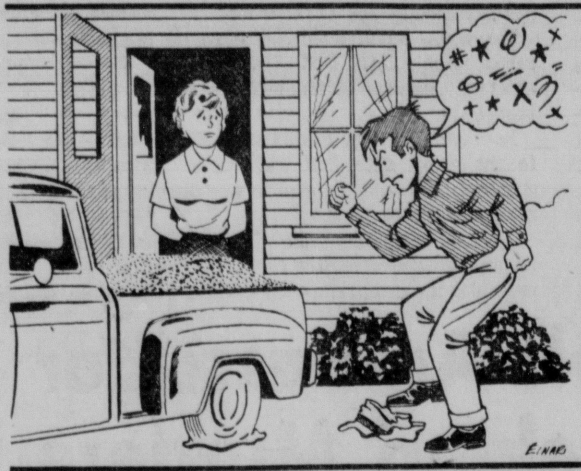

We noticed several Lincoln School District Board members who wondered aloud if the district's budget was high enough. We wonder if these individuals ever wonder if their personal budgets are high enough. We doubt it.

We don't believe in a budgetary meat-ax approach, nor do we favor extreme fiscal conservatism, but when the money is tough to come by, it's not nearly as easy to spend.

Patchwork Prairie Country

In the distance early this morning the line of low hills were cloud-shadowed and dark. I heard a rumble of thunder.

Rain! What a joy it would be to write of a rain storm in my column this week. I would tell of the silver slanting rain needles piercing the earth, the cool freshness that follows and the mud-filled puddles.

and gone. It dried on the walks in minutes, too scant an amount to measure.

This must have been the thirty per cent chance of rain that the weatherman predicted. I told a lady yesterday we needed at least a ninety per cent odds in our favor before we could expect to get a rain. "Yes, and then that would evaporate before it hit the ground," she added.

The wheat harvest has come and gone for another year without much fanfare. As usual there is always some extra work that adds to the stress of the day. The Farmer had filled the pickup with wheat and planned to haul it to the elevator the next morning. About a hundred bushels stood on the truck overnight. With the addition of sideboards he put on the truck, it is capable of holding more grain.

When the morning arrived, a tire had gone down. To change a tire with a load of grain on the truck complicates the task somewhat. He had put a couple of jacks under the back axle of the truck overnight to forestall such a mishap but a nail in a tire disregards such measures.

This morning I watched a bumblebee outside my window work diligently on the tall stalks of the snapdragons. It flew from one flower to another, tripping the tight-tipped flowers, crawling inside to partake of the nectar, then flying to another to repeat the process before flying away with a loud buzz. Before becoming air-borne there were several clumsy attempts to take off like a jumbo jet overloaded.

All morning it has been coming and going. The petunias blooming nearby seem to attract little attention from the bumblebee. I am surprised for it is the petunias that have such a heavy flower scent. Perhaps they have been visited by other insects and drained of their nectar.

Picturesque Portraits I would like to frame for the keeping:

The delicate eager beauty of Queen Anne's Lace nodding its flat-topped clusters to the wind.

The stillness of a sun-warmed thicket beside a country roadway

from which a brown thrush darts with flitting tail.

Spider-webs like fairy tablecloths stretched upon the grass near my front door.

Little girls turning hollyhocks into ladies with red velvet skirts. A tree-lined stream that divides the low hills undulating away into the distance.

Tame white ducks bobbing and dipping in an irrigation ditch.

A woodpecker dazzling the morning with its banner display of white, black and scarlet as it flits with wild vitality to a nearby tree.

The line of low purple hills against a sunset sky.

Little boys who busy themselves building cardboard houses where they can sit in secret abode while the world goes by.

Hints of pale blue light behind the pillow-banked clouds that build in the west.

A farmer watching the weather turn, feeling the cooler wind upon his brow.

Glimpses Of The Real Carter

NEW YORK — As hardened as one can become through years in this business of columning, there is always room for a sur-had given him a lift from obscurity. We were talking about issues and, as I recall it, specifically about full employment.

"When will you surface that, Governor?" I asked. Solemnly, without a trace of the familiar grin, he replied: "Well, you see, I'm saving that for my inaugural address."

I thought this must be a joke. Not for the speech in next week's primary? Not for his acceptance speech when he was nominated by his party?

Not at all. The peanut farmer from Plains, Ga., was in dead earnest. His step-by-step plans, carefully formulated and rarely disclosed to any but the intimate members of his staff, envisaged this ultimate step of the path of office for the presidency. And I do not doubt that he knew very well at that point what he meant to say in assuming the office.

Now that the nomination is an accomplished fact with the demonstration of how well he could keep the secret of his choice of Sen. Walter Mondale for vice presidency, Carter's stern decision-making quality is coming to the fore. The analogy with Richard Nixon is being suggested: a loner driven by ruthless ambition, surrounded by a handful of associates to whom he delegates faceless authority.

In my opinion, it is far too early to reach any such conclusion. Certainly it took all the drive and the stamina to get to where

Carter is today just as it took the incessant criss-crossing of the state of Georgia, shaking 800,000 hands, to win the governorship in 1970 after his crushing defeat four years earlier.

Many have found it difficult to work with Carter. Failure to match his standards can bring a cold rebuff, the anger that shows in those ice-blue eyes. Present and past associates have been talking about these traits.

Ironically, in view of his criticism of the Lone-Ranger style in the conduct of foreign policy, a parallel that comes to mind is Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, who drives his closest associates to the brink with his demands.

In his Jack-and-the-Beanstalk career, Carter has had few close friends. One of the few is Charles Kirbo, the Atlanta lawyer, whose wise counsel was invaluable in the Georgia phase of his career.

While he said he consulted with perhaps 40 persons about his choice for vice president, it is a good guess that Kirbo was one of the few with roots in Carter's past based on mutual respect. Incidentally, while he had been advertised as anti-Washington, the way he kept the secret of his choice was evidence of his understanding of Washington ways.

If he had told in advance only three or four persons around him, the secret would surely have leaked. By saving it, he kept the speculation going in a convention that tended otherwise to be ritualistic and dull.

The Republican strategists will hammer away on the alleged duality of the Carter personality. It was a favorite line of attack on Nixon: Will the real Richard Nixon please stand up? The intimation was that no reality existed back of the skillful facade of the seasoned — and ruthlessly ambitious — politician.

Will the real Jimmy Carter please stand up? Is it the twice-born Baptist who can preach love and compassion with true fervor? Or is it the tough relentless office-seeker with a pious front of "religiosity?" In my opinion, the duality is false. Like every man with a driving ambition, Carter is a complex personality. Being a loner is almost a prerequisite to success in the toughest of all games.

It may sound odd to compare the peanut farmer with the president of Princeton University but a close parallel at this moment is with Woodrow Wilson. Wilson was, in his own way, deeply religious.

Carter's meticulous thought processes, his careful deliberation, his knowledge of just where he wants to go and how compare with the same qualities in Wilson. The presidency is a long gamble and the nomination of Carter is a first step in the greatest of those gambles.

One White Knight, Slightly Soiled

WASHINGTON — Commerce Secretary Elliot Richardson, the White Knight of the Republican Party, has fallen off his charger.

Richardson is the former attorney general who assumed heroic status two years ago when he refused a White House order to dismiss Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox and got himself fired for his courage.

This earned Richardson a reputation for integrity that has now made him a vice presidential prospect. His presence on the ticket, his supporters contend, would help to defuse the Watergate issue.

But his shining reputation has now lost some of its luster. He heads a White House task force which is reviewing U.S. corporate bribery of foreign officials. The bribes were uncovered by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The scandal has rocked the world, embarrassing governments from Italy to Japan. It has also produced some red faces in corporate board rooms.

The Commerce Dept., which Richardson now heads, usually has shown great sympathy and understanding for the corporate moguls with whom it deals. Swayed perhaps by his new environment, Richardson has written a letter to Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., attacking the SEC.

Oklahoma Banker Asks Reconsideration

OMAHA (AP) — A former banker from Oklahoma, convicted last month on federal wire fraud charges in connection with a scheme by which several Nebraska grain dealers were bilked out of more than $300,000, has asked a federal judge to reconsider his decision in the case, or to give him a new trial before a jury.

Thomas McQuade, an Omaha attorney representing Harry Don Marley, the former president of the Sequoyah State Bank of Muldrow, appeared Wednesday before U.S. District Court Judge Robert V. Denney.

McQuade argued that the government never produced enough evidence to convict Marley and never showed "willful criminal intent" on Marley's part.

Marley, who now works for a car dealer in Fort Smith, Ark., was relieved of his duties at the bank last August, shortly after a federal grand jury returned a 47-count indictment naming Marley and 14 others in the scheme. Marley's case was the last to be disposed of.

Denney heard three days of testimony in Marley's non-jury trial in March, then issued a memorandum June 1, finding Marley guilty on one count of wire fraud in connection with a telephone call he made to a York, Neb., banker in November 1974.

According to the indictment and stipulated testimony, the scheme centered on a firm which may never have actually existed — Redwood Farms, Inc., of Sallisaw, Okla.

As part of the scheme, participants, operating under the auspices of Redwood Farms, purchased grain from elevators at York, Cozad, Plymouth, Syracuse and McCook, Neb., using Marley's bank as a financial reference.

The grain was paid for with checks drawn on the Redwood Farms account at the Sequoyah State Bank. After the grain was trucked away from the elevators, payment of the checks was stopped, leaving the elevator operators with worthless pieces of paper.

Marley was originally charged with using his position at the bank to aid and abet the scheme and with wire fraud. All but three of the 47 counts were dismissed, and Denney found Marley innocent of two counts.

Marley, testifying in his own defense, denied the allegations that he was aware of the scheme and participated in it.

Marley noted that he did not make any financial gain from the scheme, and explained that principals in Redwood Farms told him they were stopping payment on the checks because they were not receiving the grade of grain they had agreed to purchase.

But Denney found that Marley either purposely kept himself ignorant of the situation or was grossly indifferent to the truth or falsity of statements he made about the Redwood Farms account. The judge also found that a statement made to Marion Bonham, president of the First National Bank of York, "was made with specific intent to carry out an essential step in the scheme."

Xerox Corp. Profits Up Over Last Year

Stamford, Conn. (AP) — Xerox Corp., a leading manufacturer of office copiers and duplicating machines, said its profits for the three months ending June 30 were $103 million, or $1.29 a share. Last year Xerox earned $99 million, or $1.25 a share, in its second quarter before the board's decision to get out of the business of manufacturing computer mainframes reduced that quarter's profits to $7 million — 9 cents a share.

Advance ticket sales for the State Fair entertainment package have gone very well with Bob Hope the "main draw" and Johnny Cash a "close second," according to Helen Wadhams, administrative assistant to the State Fair board.

A reserved seat costs $5 and a general admission seat will be $1.

Bones Of Sheep, Horse Found In Cairo Graves

Judge Won't Dismiss Newspaper's Lawsuit

Gering (AP) — Scotts Bluff County District Court Judge Alfred Kortum has overruled a motion to dismiss a suit filed by the Scotts Bluff Star-Herald over the closing of a preliminary hearing earlier this year.

The motion was filed by the Nebraska attorney general's office in a suit against Scotts Bluff County Court Judge J. Glenn Camerer and taken under advisement by Kortum June 10.

Kortum's action means the newspaper's lawsuit will proceed. However, no hearing date was set.

The suit stems from Camerer's closing of a March 30 preliminary hearing for Steven

D. Adams of Scottsbluff, who was charged with first-degree murder in the March 17 death of Lavonne Devita Brethauer of Scottsbluff.

Public and news media were prevented from attending a preliminary hearing. Adams later pleaded no contest to an amended charge of second-degree murder and was sentenced to 20 years in the state penitentiary.

The suit asked that a transcript of the hearing be made public and Camerer's action be ruled unconstitutional. Camerer made a copy of the transcript available after Adams pleaded no contest to the amended charge in May.

Oklahoma Banker Asks Reconsideration

OMAHA (AP) — A former banker from Oklahoma, convicted last month on federal wire fraud charges in connection with a scheme by which several Nebraska grain dealers were bilked out of more than $360,000, has asked a federal judge to reconsider his decision in the case, or to give him a new trial before a jury.

Thomas McQuade, an Omaha attorney representing Harry Don Marley, the former president of the Sequoyah State Bank of Muldrow, appeared Wednesday before U.S. District Court Judge Robert V. Denney.

McQuade argued that the government never produced enough evidence to convict Marley and never showed "willful criminal intent" on Marley's part.

Marley, who now works for a car dealer in Fort Smith, Ark., was relieved of his duties at the bank last August, shortly after a federal grand jury returned a 47-count indictment naming Marley and 14 others in the scheme. Marley's case was the last to be disposed of.

Denney heard three days of testimony in Marley's non-jury trial in March, then issued a memorandum June 1, finding Marley guilty on one count of wire fraud in connection with a telephone call he made to a York, Neb., banker in November 1974.

According to the indictment and stipulated testimony, the scheme centered on a firm which may never have actually existed — Redwood Farms, Inc., of Sallisaw, Okla.

As part of the scheme, participants, operating under the auspices of Redwood Farms, purchased grain from elevators at York, Cozad, Plymouth, Syracuse and McCook, Neb., using Marley's bank as a financial reference.

The grain was paid for with checks drawn on the Redwood Farms account at the Sequoyah State Bank. After the grain was trucked away from the elevators, payment of the checks was stopped, leaving the elevator operators with worthless pieces of paper.

Marley was originally charged with using his position at the bank to aid and abet the scheme and with wire fraud. All but three of the 47 counts were dismissed, and Denney found Marley innocent of two counts.

Marley, testifying in his own defense, denied the allegations that he was aware of the scheme and participated in it.

Marley noted that he did not make any financial gain from the scheme, and explained that principals in Redwood Farms told him they were stopping payment on the checks because they were not receiving the grade of grain they had agreed to purchase.

But Denney found that Marley either purposely kept himself ignorant of the situation or was grossly indifferent to the truth or falsity of statements he made about the Redwood Farms account. The judge also found that a statement made to Marion Bonham, president of the First National Bank of York, "was made with specific intent to carry out an essential step in the scheme . . ."

State Fair Ticket Sales Going Well

Advance ticket sales for the State Fair entertainment package have gone very well with Bob Hope the "main draw" and Johnny Cash a "close second," according to Helen Wadhams, administrative assistant to the State Fair board.

Ticket sales for all of the shows have been good, she said. "We have sold $50,000 worth of tickets already," she said, adding that so far no "great push" has been made to sell tickets for the shows which will be staged in the new air-conditioned sports complex on the fairgrounds.

A reserved seat costs $5 and a general admission seat will be $4.

Bones Of Sheep, Horse Found In Cairo Graves

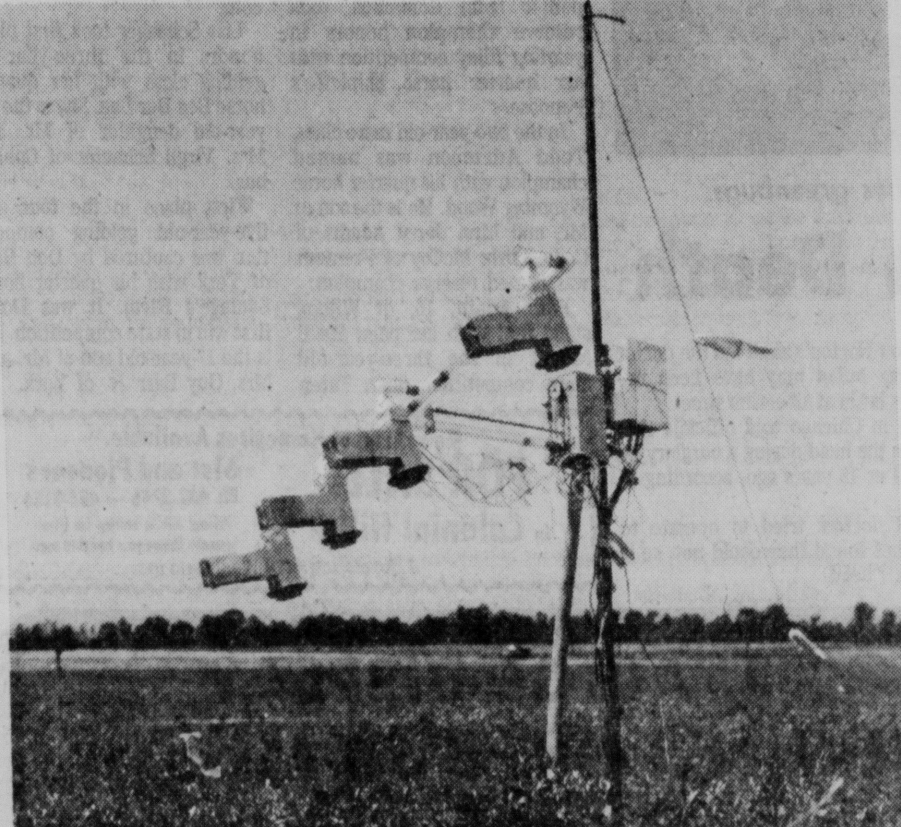

Cairo (UPI) — The bones of animals buried in caskets near the Cairo cemetery probably about the turn of the century were uncovered Wednesday during a land leveling operation southwest of Cairo.

Kent Bush, exhibits director at the Stahr Museum in Grand Island, was asked to investigate the find and said the burial of animals in caskets was unusual at the turn of the century.

He said the bones found in a six-foot long cedar box appeared to be the remains of a small sheep, while a second, two-foot long box contained nothing. Other bones found in the graves appeared to be those of a horse, he said.

Bush speculated the animals could have been family pets.

Wilfred Luhn, who owns the land, said Julius Locke homesteaded the land in 1881 and deeded part of the land for the Cairo cemetery in 1882.

Judge Won't Dismiss Newspaper's Lawsuit

Gering (AP) — Scotts Bluff County District Court Judge Alfred Kortum has overruled a motion to dismiss a suit filed by the Scotts Bluff Star-Herald over the closing of a preliminary hearing earlier this year.

The motion was filed by the Nebraska attorney general's office in a suit against Scotts Bluff County Court Judge J. Glenn Camerer and taken under advisement by Kortum June 10.

Kortum's action means the newspaper's lawsuit will proceed. However, no hearing date was set.

Doctor Revives Small Town's Medical Center

Tekamah (AP) — The Cottonwood Medical Center, closed since mid-May because of a lack of medical personnel, has reopened with the arrival of Dr. Robert Pelley.

Pelley, 44, had a general family medical practice in Cheyenne. He became medical director of the Cottonwood center Monday.

Pelley recently gave up his 13-year practice in Cheyenne and moved to Nebraska in search of a small-town practice.

"I wasn't happy in a larger community. I started out in medicine to be a family doctor in a small town. I got sidetracked for a few years. Now, I'm doing what I've wanted to do all along," he said.

Pelley is a Harlan, Tex., native who moved with his family to Fremont when he was 6 years old.

His father operated the Pelley Shoe Store in downtown Fremont for many years.

He is a 1961 graduate of the University of Nebraska School of Medicine.

Scientists Working On Cavity Prevention

Houston (UPI) — Scientists are finding ways to prevent cancer patients receiving head and neck radiation from losing their teeth to cavities, according to a University of Texas dental researcher.

Dr. Samuel Dreizen said saliva plays a significant role in the control of mouth bacteria and in the protection of teeth against cavities. He said patients given radiotherapy usually develop cavities when the major salivary glands are included in the radiation field.

Miss Nebraska Is Janet Goode, Not Sharon Pelc

Kearney — The new Miss Nebraska who will be crowned here Saturday night will succeed Janet Goode of Omaha.

The reigning queen was identified incorrectly earlier this week as Sharon Sue Pelc of Johnstown. Actually, Miss Pelc was awarded the honor in 1974.

The annual Miss Nebraska Scholarship Pageant opens three nights of competition in Kearney's high school auditorium Thursday. Thirteen contestants are entered.

Degree Means 'Nothing Really'

During a college career spanning four American presidents and lasting 13 years, recently graduated Tom Thies of Crab Orchard attended four colleges and received a degree that means "nothing really."

"The only time it really meant anything was when my stepfather said, 'That's one graduation I'm gonna go to,'" Thies said. "It meant a lot more to other people than to me."

For Thies, 31, who was graduated from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln in May with a general agriculture major and a B average, it's the knowledge gained, not the degree, which means something.

"The biggest thing I got out of college was that I found out how much I don't know," he said. "I think that really opens a person's eyes."

They had to be because Thies' college travels read like a roadmap of southeastern Nebraska.

He attended Nebraska Wesleyan University in Lincoln from the fall of 1963 through the spring of 1965. Then it was on to Fairbury Junior College for a week. Thies took a U-turn and returned to Wesleyan for one semester in 1966. Then he hung a far right to Peru State College for the 1970-71 academic year after serving in the army before returning to Lincoln to attend UNL in 1971.

It was a career dominated by indecision, uncertainty, nervousness, frustration and the establishment of what now is a lucrative fertilizer application and pesticide spraying business providing Thies with a $225,000 annual income.

"When I came back after three years in the Army, I didn't know what I wanted to do, although I felt I wanted to take advantage of the GI Bill by going back to school," Thies said. He registered at Peru State, but the summer of 1970 made him change his opinion — this time with a firm goal in mind.

"My father-in-law, who is in the lumberyard business in Lewiston, was selling fertilizer on a commission basis and was getting tired of the hassle," Thies said. "He asked if I wanted to do it, so I bought a four-year-old highboy at a pretty good price."

"I saw there was a fairly good potential and I made a good living during the summer," he said. "I became interested in agriculture and decided to go to the ag college (at UNL) before entering Peru."

Since it was too late to register for university classes, college officials counseled him to take courses that could be transferred, Thies said. He decided to major in agronomy once entering UNL.

"The first semester I went up there (to UNL) was the biggest deciding thing I've ever done. The professors gave me more encouragement and more reason to go to school than I'd ever had before."

So when Thies dropped out after his junior year because his business, which had grown from serving 2,500 acres to 12,000, got too demanding, there wasn't much uncertainty about returning a year later.

He decided to change his major from agronomy to general agriculture so he could be graduated in two rather than three semesters, and headed back to Lincoln, "the first time I'd wanted to go back to school."

The business, in which Thies now handles the marketing, advising and consulting after selling the equipment to his brother, caused the two problems which bothered him most at UNL — worrying and commuting, he said.

No Evidence Of Foul Play Found In Drifter's Death

Geneva (AP) — The death of a drifter whose body was found along U.S. 6 just west of the Fillmore-Saline County line last Saturday probably will be attributed to natural causes.

"I'm almost definite," Deputy Fillmore County Atty. Daniel E. Bryan said Wednesday.

Bryan identified the transient as Glenwood Paul Horton, 50.

Bryan said an investigation showed that Horton was born in Leadwood, Mo., but had spent time in Chicago and St. Louis.

Bryan said Horton has relatives, but they have not been found.

At first, authorities thought Horton's death might be a case of murder because the slug from a .32-caliber bullet was found in Horton's head.

In four days of intensive investigation by the county sheriff's office and the State Patrol, "no evidence of foul play of any kind" was uncovered, Bryan said.

Bryan said Horton's wallet, which didn't have any money in it, was found intact, and that some small pieces of jewelry, such as a ring, were undisturbed.

Bryan explained that during the investigation, one of Horton's friends was located in Chicago.

The pathologist who conducted the autopsy on Horton's body could not determine the exact cause of death because of the advanced state of decomposition. The autopsy report said Horton had been dead for about a week when his body was discovered.

Surgical marks on Horton's skull led the doctor to believe that the bullet may have been imbedded in Horton's brain at an earlier time.

Horton's friend in Chicago told officials that Horton was shot in the head during a burglary he was involved in 10 or 15 years ago, according to Bryan.

The friend said doctors tried to operate to remove the slug, but found they could not, so it was left in Horton's head.

"I'm almost definite," Deputy Fillmore County Atty. Daniel E. Bryan said Wednesday.

Bryan identified the transient as Glenwood Paul Horton, 50.

Bryan said an investigation showed that Horton was born in Leadwood, Mo., but had spent time in Chicago and St. Louis.

Bryan said Horton has relatives, but they have not been found.

At first, authorities thought Horton's death might be a case of murder because the slug from a .32-caliber bullet was found in Horton's head.

In four days of intensive investigation by the county sheriff's office and the State Patrol, "no evidence of foul play of any kind" was uncovered, Bryan said.

Bryan said Horton's wallet, which didn't have any money in it, was found intact, and that some small pieces of jewelry, such as a ring, were undisturbed.

Bryan explained that during the investigation, one of Horton's friends was located in Chicago.

The pathologist who conducted the autopsy on Horton's body could not determine the exact cause of death because of the advance state of decomposition. The autopsy report said Horton had been dead for about a week when his body was discovered.

Surgical marks on Horton's skull led the doctor to believe that the bullet may have been imbedded in Horton's brain at an earlier time.

Horton's friend in Chicago told officials that Horton was shot in the head during a burglary he was involved in 10 or 15 years ago, according to Bryan.

The friend said doctors tried to operate to remove the slug, but found they could not, so it was left in Horton's head.

Miller Is Fined $1,000

Omaha (AP) — A former reserve deputy in the Douglas County sheriff's department was fined a total of $1,000 Tuesday in Douglas County District Court for two counts of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

The charges involved smoking marijuana with the juveniles and showing them pornographic films.

Judge Samuel Caniglia levied the fines against Charles L. Miller, 41, and said only Miller's lack of a prior criminal record saved him from a jail term.

Each count of the misdemeanor offense is punishable by up to six months in jail, a $500 fine, or both.

Miller's name was removed from the sheriff's list of volunteer reserve deputies following his arrest in February, and he was declared suspended by Chief Deputy Sheriff Joseph Thornton pending an investigation.

Miller, an employee of the Omaha Public Power District, had worked as a reserve deputy since 1968, riding in cruisers with regular deputies and assisting with jail visitors.

Miller was arrested after a male juvenile told sheriff's deputies he and two other youths had been to a marijuana party at Miller's residence and watched pornographic movies.

Miller pleaded guilty to the two counts of contributing to the delinquency of a minor on June 3.

He initially was charged with unlawful possession of marijuana with intent to deliver, but that charge was amended.

Resignation Of Pastor Accepted

This week's resignation of the Rev. Alfred Ernst, senior pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church, was unanimously accepted at the regular voters assembly.

Voters still must meet in a specially called assembly to act on the resignation of the Rev. Paul Krohn, associate pastor.

The two pastors resigned after a reconciliation committee set up last December recommended that they and two professional workers seek positions at other churches.

Roland Luedtke, minority spokesman, said "the trouble is just beginning" for the congregation after the voters assembly adopted a resolution prohibiting anyone who refused to speak against Evangelical Lutherans in Mission and Seminars from holding an office in the church.

The resolution called sympathizers of those organizations divisive to the unity of Trinity Lutheran.

Testimony In Favor Of Public Radio

The testimony is in and it now is up to the Nebraska Educational Television Commission to decide.

Will it be public radio or no public radio for Nebraskaans?

The NETV Commission is expected to take action on the issue Thursday.

Citizens had their day in court Tuesday evening when NETV broadcast live a statewide hearing on public radio.

The response was overwhelmingly in favor of public radio.

Phone calls flooded in from across the state and then some; one individual called from Athens, Ga.

Farmers and ranchers said they would like something educational and stimulating to listen to while spending 15 hours a day on a tractor.

According to NETV commission chairman Philip Heckman, 134 persons called in. The tally: 128 for, 11 against.

In addition, there were 16 pieces of written testimony, 14 for, 2 against.

The results of straw votes and petitions from various parts of the state were also overwhelmingly in favor of public radio — 707 to 4.

Live testimony in the studio was a landslide — 14 for public radio, none against.

All told according to Heckman, 871 people spoke out. The final results, 808 for, 13 against.

The decision, however, rests with the nine NETV commissioners.

Legislature Dominated By Newcomers

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

It's a new Legislature headed for new leadership.

The departure of Sen. Eugene Mahoney from the Unicameral sharpens the focus on what has been a slowly evolving fact of legislative life.

Election year by election year the Legislature has been remodeled by the voters and by individual decisions by senators to hang up their legislative togas.

The result has been a nearly wholesale change in the legislative cast over the past decade.

Now Mahoney's resignation will combine with the approaching retirement of Sen. Jules Burbach to open up the two major leadership posts in the Unicameral.

Mahoney, a senator since 1961, is leaving the chairmanship of the Legislative Council's executive board to become director of the Game and Parks Commission.

Burbach is winding up 20 years in the Legislature in January, when he steps aside as speaker.

In rough terms, the speaker is the governing head of the Legislature while the executive board chairman is the chief administrative officer.

Sen. Wally Barnett of Lincoln moves up from the vice chairmanship to take Mahoney's post. A six-year legislator, Barnett said he may be a candidate when the 1977 Legislature elects a new chairman for a two-year term next January.

Burbach's speakership expires with the conclusion of his legislative term. Members of the 1977 Unicameral will choose a new speaker in January.

The new leaders will preside over a new Legislature.

More than 70% of the senators who gather together to open the 1977 session will have been elected in the 1970's. Only seven can count more than 10 years of legislative experience.

At least twenty-one of the 49 legislators will be beginning or in the midst of their first term.

If Sen. Harold Simpson of Lincoln is elected to a seat on the Public Service Commission, his appointed successor would make the 22nd first-term.

Seldom, if ever, has a Nebraska Legislature been so newly constructed.

And the 1977 Legislature's leadership is likely to come from the ranks of the 42 senators who have been around for 10 years or less.

None of the seven veterans of more than a decade of legislative service is currently an active candidate for either the speakership or the executive board chairmanship.

Sen. George Syas of Omaha, a candidate for re-election this November, has served 26 years in the Unicameral.

Appropriations Committee Chairman Richard Marvel of Hastings, unopposed for re-election to the Legislature, counts 22 years as a lawmaker.

Burbach had been the third ranking veteran in terms of seniority. Retiring Sen. William Skarda of Omaha had been fourth with 18 years.

After sixteen years in the Legislature, Sen. William Hasebrook of West Point was fifth. He will be the third ranking veteran in terms of seniority in 1977.

Mahoney leaves after more than 15 years in the legislative body.

The remaining senators with more than 10 years of service include Sens. Jerome Warner of Aurora, with 14 years each, and Sens. Herb Duis of Gothenburg and Harold Moylan of Omaha, with a dozen each.

Warner and Duis must win re-election in November to add to their totals.

Aide To Zorinsky May Fill Vacancy

Omaha (UPI) — Gov. J. James Exon confirmed Wednesday the executive secretary to Mayor Edward Zorinsky is the top candidate to succeed State Sen. Eugene Mahoney in Omaha's 5th Legislative District.

Exon said he hoped to make the appointment of Mrs. Bernice Labeledz, 56, final later this week.

"I would be deeply honored to accept," Mrs. Labeledz said. "I told the governor I would have to talk with my family and with the mayor."

The governor and Mrs. Labeledz commented in interviews with UPI after the wire service learned Mrs. Labeledz was the top candidate to replace Mahoney, who officially resigned Wednesday to accept the directorship of the State Game and Parks Commission.

Exon said he accepted the resignation of Mahoney, "considered Nebraska's most powerful lawmaker, with 'deep regret.'"

The governor said Mrs. Labeledz was among "three or four candidates" for the post, "and I would consider her the top contender at this particular time."

Exon declined to name the other candidates, but acknowledged the name of David Marrero, AFL-CIO Criminal Diversionary and Outreach Project director in Omaha, had been recommended to him during several telephone calls.

Both Marrero and Mrs. Labeledz are active in Democratic Party activities in the 5th District, which contains a solid labor and Roman Catholic voting bloc.

Mrs. Labeledz, considered to have considerable influence herself at city hall, came into the mayor's office when Zorinsky was elected in 1973. Prior to that, she worked for the Nebraska State Department of Revenue for 6½ years.

Mrs. Labeledz, who currently earns $13,125 annually, said she wanted to confer with her family, which she described as "closely knit," and with Zorinsky.

In addition to her husband Stanley, a retired Omaha policeman, and four children, Mrs. Labeledz has nine sisters and seven brothers.

"We're all very interested in what each other does," Mrs. Labeledz said. "Before I make up my mind, I would sort of like to sit down with all my family."

"I think Ed's (Zorinsky) the greatest. There's nobody like him. I certainly want to talk with him before making up my mind."

Both Mahoney and Mrs. Labeledz have played important advisory roles in Zorinsky's Democratic U.S. Senate campaign.

Still up in the air is the outcome of a Douglas County District Court case filed last spring against the City of Omaha by the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

District Judge John Clark issued a temporary order in favor of the union and thus froze a city charter provision prohibiting public employees from participating in politics.

Mrs. Labeledz said she had her attorney checking on the progress of the case to see whether it would have any effect on her accepting the Unicameral post.

NCLU Intends To File Lawsuit For McCarthy

The Nebraska Civil Liberties Union intends to file a lawsuit for Eugene McCarthy forces to test the state law that bars petition candidates for president from the Nebraska ballot.

A Nebraska group headed by Phyllis J. Paine of Omaha filed documents last month forming a committee to back McCarthy, former U.S. senator from Minnesota, in his bid to mount an independent presidential candidacy.

The documents were accepted by the secretary of state's office, but Deputy Secretary of State Ralph Englert said McCarthy's name "couldn't be placed on the state ballot unless a successful lawsuit overturned a state law."

Barbara Gaither, head of the NCLU, said the law firm of Hornbeck and Luther in Lincoln would handle the lawsuit.

Zorinsky Gives Dyas High Post

Omaha (AP) — In a move to bolster party unity, Omaha Mayor Edward Zorinsky, the Democratic candidate for the seat being vacated by Republican Sen. Roman Hruska, has appointed his primary opponent to a top position in his campaign.

Heß Dyas of Lincoln, a former state party chairman who narrowly lost the nomination to Zorinsky in the May primary, has been chosen to coordinate statewide financial and organizational efforts for the Zorinsky campaign.

Dyas will share the responsibility with another former state party head, Omaha attorney John Mitchell.

Demo Spanks Curtis For Helping Interests

By The Associated Press

The Democratic national committeeman from Nebraska Wednesday criticized Sen. Carl Curtis' handling of tax law proposals for California interests.

"As Democratic national committeeman," said Allen O'Donnell of Wayne, "I feel that this is a very good example of why Jimmy Carter calls the tax structure in the United States a total disgrace."

O'Donnell, a Wayne State College professor, said in a telephone interview from Omaha that the Curtis action shows why the Democratic presidential nominee's words should be heeded and the party platform on tax law overhauls followed.

Curtis was named in recently published reports as the lawmaker who arranged for special tax legislation to be pushed through the Senate Finance Committee.

According to the reports, the tax provisions would benefit just four California businessmen.

"It's a very good example of how we're being represented in Washington," O'Donnell said in criticizing the Nebraska Republican from Minden.

The Democratic committeeman said the report shows why a Democrat should defeat Curtis in 1978 if the GOP lawmaker decides to seek another term.

It has resulted in introduction of innovative courses, some taught by teams rather than by individuals, and has proved popular with students.

Legislature Dominated By Newcomers

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

It's a new Legislature headed for new leadership.

The departure of Sen. Eugene Mahoney from the Unicameral sharpens the focus on what has been a slowly evolving fact of legislative life.

Election year by election year the Legislature has been remodeled by the voters and by individual decisions by senators to hang up their legislative togas.

The result has been a nearly wholesale change in the legislative cast over the past decade.

Now Mahoney's resignation will combine with the approaching retirement of Sen. Jules Burbach to open up the two major leadership posts in the Unicameral.

Mahoney, a senator since 1961, is leaving the chairmanship of the Legislative Council's executive board to become director of the Game and Parks Commission.

Burbach is winding up 20 years in the Legislature in January, when he steps aside as speaker.

In rough terms, the speaker is the governing head of the Legislature while the executive board chairman is the chief administrative officer.

Sen. Wally Barnett of Lincoln moves up from the vice chairmanship to take Mahoney's post. A six-year legislator, Barnett said he may be a candidate when the 1977 Legislature elects a new chairman for a two-year term next January.

Burbach's speakership expires with the conclusion of his legislative term. Members of the 1977 Unicameral will choose a new speaker in January.

The new leaders will preside over a new Legislature.

More than 70% of the senators who gather together to open the 1977 session will have been elected in the 1970's. Only seven can count more than 10 years of legislative experience.

At least twenty-one of the 49 legislators will be beginning or in the midst of their first term.

If Sen. Harold Simpson of Lincoln is elected to a seat on the Public Service Commission, his appointed successor would make the 22nd first-term.

Seldom, if ever, has a Nebraska Legislature been so newly constructed.

And the 1977 Legislature's leadership is likely to come from the ranks of the 42 senators who have been around for 10 years or less.

None of the seven veterans of more than a decade of legislative service is currently an active candidate for either the speakership or the executive board chairmanship.

Sen. George Syas of Omaha, a candidate for re-election this November, has served 26 years in the Unicameral.

Appropriations Committee Chairman Richard Marvel of Hastings, unopposed for re-election to the Legislature, counts 22 years as a lawmaker.

Burbach had been the third ranking veteran in terms of seniority. Retiring Sen. William Skarda of Omaha had been fourth with 18 years.

After sixteen years in the Legislature, Sen. William Hasebrook of West Point was fifth. He will be the third ranking veteran in terms of seniority in 1977.

Mahoney leaves after more than 15 years in the legislative body.

The remaining senators with more than 10 years of service include Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly and Maurice Kremer of Aurora, with 14 years each, and Sen. Herb Duis of Gothenburg and Harold Moylan of Omaha, with a dozen each.

Warner and Duis must win re-election in November to add to their totals.

Aide To Zorinsky May Fill Vacancy

Omaha (UPI) — Gov. J. James Exon confirmed Wednesday the executive secretary to Mayor Edward Zorinsky is the top candidate to succeed State Sen. Eugene Mahoney in Omaha's 5th Legislative District.

Exon said he hoped to make the appointment of Mrs. Bernice Labeledz, 56, final later this week.

"I would be deeply honored to accept," Mrs. Labeledz said. "I told the governor I would have to talk with my family and with the mayor."

The governor and Mrs. Labeledz commented in interviews with UPI after the wire service learned Mrs. Labeledz was the top candidate to replace Mahoney, who officially resigned Wednesday to accept the directorship of the State Game and Parks Commission.

Exon said he accepted the resignation of Mahoney, "considered Nebraska's most powerful lawmaker, with 'deep regret.'"

The governor said Mrs. Labeledz was among "three or four candidates" for the post, "and I would consider her the top contender at this particular time."

Exon declined to name the other candidates, but acknowledged the name of David Marrero, AFL-CIO Criminal Diversionary and Outreach Project director in Omaha, had been recommended to him during several telephone calls.

Both Marrero and Mrs. Labeledz are active in Democratic Party activities in the 5th District, which contains a solid labor and Roman Catholic voting bloc.

Mrs. Labeledz, considered to have considerable influence herself at city hall, came into the mayor's office when Zorinsky was elected in 1973. Prior to that, she worked for the Nebraska State Department of Revenue for 6½ years.

Mrs. Labeledz, who currently earns $13,125 annually, said she wanted to confer with her family, which she described as "closely knit," and with Zorinsky.

In addition to her husband Stanley, a retired Omaha policeman, and four children, Mrs. Labeledz has nine sisters and seven brothers.

"We're all very interested in what each other does," Mrs. Labeledz said. "Before I make up my mind, I would sort of like to sit down with all my family."

"I think Ed's (Zorinsky) the greatest. There's nobody like him. I certainly want to talk with him before making up my mind."

Both Mahoney and Mrs. Labeledz have played important advisory roles in Zorinsky's Democratic U.S. Senate campaign.

Still up in the air is the outcome of a Douglas County District Court case filed last spring against the City of Omaha by the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

District Judge John Clark issued a temporary order in favor of the union and thus froze a city charter provision prohibiting public employees from participating in politics.

Mrs. Labeledz said she had her attorney checking on the progress of the case to see whether it would have any effect on her accepting the Unicameral post.

NCLU Intends To File Lawsuit For McCarthy

The Nebraska Civil Liberties Union intends to file a lawsuit for Eugene McCarthy forces to test the state law that bars petition candidates for president from the Nebraska ballot.

A Nebraska group headed by Phyllis J. Paine of Omaha filed documents last month forming a committee to back McCarthy, former U.S. senator from Minnesota, in his bid to mount an independent presidential candidacy.

The documents were accepted by the secretary of state's office, but Deputy Secretary of State Ruth Englert said McCarthy's name couldn't be placed on the state ballot unless a successful lawsuit overturned a state law.

Barbara Gaither, head of the NCLU, said the law firm of Hornbeck and Luther in Lincoln would handle the lawsuit.

Zorinsky Gives Dyas High Post

Omaha (AP) — In a move to bolster party unity, Omaha Mayor Edward Zorinsky, the Democratic candidate for the seat being vacated by Republican Sen. Roman Hruska, has appointed his primary opponent to a top position in his campaign.

Hess Dyas of Lincoln, a former state party chairman who narrowly lost the nomination to Zorinsky in the May primary, has been chosen to coordinate statewide financial and organizational efforts for the Zorinsky campaign.

Dyas will share the responsibility with another former state party head, Omaha attorney John Mitchell.

Demo Spanks Curtis For Helping Interests

By The Associated Press

The Democratic national committeeman from Nebraska Wednesday criticized Sen. Carl Curtis' handling of tax law proposals for California interests.

"As Democratic national committeeman," said Allen O'Donnell of Wayne, "I feel that this is a very good example of why Jimmy Carter calls the tax structure in the United States a total disgrace."

O'Donnell, a Wayne State College professor, said in a telephone interview from Omaha that the Curtis action shows why the Democratic presidential nominee's words should be heeded and the party platform on tax law overhauls followed.

Curtis was named in recently published reports as the lawmaker who arranged for special tax legislation to be pushed through the Senate Finance Committee.

According to the reports, the tax provisions would benefit just four California businessmen.

"It's a very good example of how we're being represented in Washington," O'Donnell said in criticizing the Nebraska Republican from Minden.

The Democratic committeeman said the report shows why a Democrat should defeat Curtis in 1978 if the GOP lawmaker decides to seek another term.

Mother-In-Law Is Moving In

By JOANNE FARRIS
QUESTION: My husband's mother is coming to live with us, and I am worried about how it will work out. We have a separate section of the house for her since our children are all off on their own. But I was looking forward to us having freedom to do as we please after 25 years of marriage and raising a family.
 When she comes our freedom may go out the window. She thinks she is the only person who truly knows my husband, and whenever she comes here she gets up before me to fix his breakfast, takes his clothes in her bathroom and washes them by hand, bakes little favorite things for him when I'm out in the afternoon, and in general makes me feel in the way. My husband laughs and says she does it to keep busy. How can I cope with this when she comes here for good?
ANSWER: Your husband is probably right, but that still doesn't make you feel good about having her do the things that you like to do for your husband; these tasks probably seem to both of you as evidences of love for him, which complicates the matter.

 Why not guide your mother-in-law to channel her energies into some activities where you and she won't be clashing? There are a number of senior organizations in your city which can use her talents. Once she finds a way to be useful to others and gets actively involved she won't have all that energy to put to work at your house.
 Before she comes you might check with Retired Senior Volunteer Programs to see where they need help. Line up a couple of groups she could work for and then invite her to check them out, after she's had a reasonable time to get settled with you, of course. You and your husband between you can figure out possible things she'd like from among the activities RSVP recommends.
 As far as freedom is concerned, once she gets acclimated and busy on her own, why can't you and your husband take off on trips now and then and generally be free? She will want to be free to come and go as she sees fit. By doing that yourselves you invite her to do the same.

 One important factor in making a situation like yours work is for each of you to respect the privacy of the other. Since she has space of her own in your home, she'll be able to entertain her friends there, which is great for all three of you.
 You'll need to have a few ground rules I venture to say, and I think those will turn out best if you and your husband and she work them out together so you all understand them and agree on them, much as you would if one of your adult children came home to live with you.
 Courtesy and the resultant consideration can smooth over a lot of bumps; "Please" and "thank you" may be old-fashioned, but they have lasted all through the centuries because they serve us well.

Week-Long Slump Ends

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market halted a weeklong decline with a mild technical upturn in moderate trading Wednesday.

the past six sessions, posted a 1.15 gain to 989.44.

Advances outdistanced declines by about a 7-6 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Big Board volume totaled

18.35 million shares, against 18.81 million Tuesday.

The market registered little reaction either way to the government's report at the opening that its consumer price index rose .5 per cent in June.

Anti-Mobile Home Laws Successfully Challenged

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

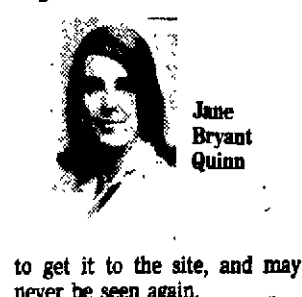

New York — The time will come when owners of single-family homes can no longer keep mobile homes out of the neighborhood.

The governor of Vermont, for example, has just signed a bill ending discrimination against mobile homes. From now on, if a lot there is zoned single-family, it won't make any difference if the house has wheels. In Washington State, Seattle lawyer Russell Austin Jr. has successfully attacked the zoning laws of several communities that kept mobile homes out. Similar actions are occurring elsewhere in the country.

The dream of many mobile home owners who rent space in parks is to have a piece of land of their own. They want to be safe from the fear of eviction, and away from park rules that circumscribe their way of life. They want, in short, the same security of property enjoyed by owners of site-built homes.

But even when they can afford the land, it's hard to find a spot. Towns and counties zone them out, or permit them only on rental mobile home parks. "We had a case in Colorado where a man was living in a real shack," Nancy White, an official of the American Mobilehome Association told me. "When he got rid of the shack and bought a new, $10,000 mobile home, the county came out and told him to get rid of it."

Mobile home owners are defensive about their reputation as "trailer trash." The wheels of a mobile home are used only to get it to the site, and may never be seen again. As much as possible, the units are being built to resemble regular homes — sometimes on sunken foundations, so they won't stand that telltale wheel-width above the ground. Mobiles come with patios, porches, carports, room extensions, peaked shingled roofs, even bay windows. If two big ones are joined together (called double-wides), they may provide as much as 1,900 square feet of living space — enough for the house to include three comfortable bedrooms, two baths and a den. With the new federal standards for mobile-home construction — the first-ever national building code — mobiles should be more sturdy build, and last longer.

A lot of people hate the look of mobile homes, but there are millions who love them. Probably their most lovable feature is price. At $44,000, today's average-priced new home is beyond the reach of the average wage earner. But he can get a nice mobile home for $12,000 to $18,000. Add in the price of a lot (if available), a foundation, and sewer, water and electrical hookups, and he can set up housekeeping for $25,000 or less. Mobile home manufacturers estimate that 80% of the new mobile homes sold are put on private land. But it's mostly in rural areas, where there's no zoning. If cities and suburbs accept mobile-home subdivisions, it's likely to be along highways or other spots where owners of regular homes are loathe to live.

Dealers say that the squeeze on regular housing is bringing a more affluent customer into their showrooms — the family making around $15,000 a year, rather than retirees or young-marrieds who get only $7,000 or $8,000. Higher-income families tend to buy double wides, which they hope to live in permanently. These buyers are particularly incensed at zoning laws that discriminate against them.

Some mobile home parks sell developed lots instead of renting them out. But it's not enough to meet demand. In some places, residents in rental parks have bought the owner out and switched to condominium or cooperative ownership.

But ownership parks aren't the final answer. Mobile-home tenants' associations are bombarding state legislatures with demands that they be treated like any other homeowner, with the right to buy property and live in a house that meets the local requirement for square feet of living space. Their lawyers are at work, too, challenging exclusionary zoning.

If you hate mobile homes, perhaps you ought to take another look. One of these days, there may be one next door.

Firm Already Runs Air Cargo Service

The Star incorrectly reported in Wednesday's edition that the operators of the Airport Limousine Service were thinking of dropping that service to start an air freight business.

The company already runs an air cargo business, Lincoln Air Freight, along with its limousine service. John Klekamp, director of the service, said the company wants to discontinue its unprofitable limousine service to devote itself to the profitable cargo business.

The concessions for the two businesses at the airport are not connected, Klekamp said.

It was also incorrectly reported that Klekamp accused hotel courtesy car drivers of soliciting passengers inside the terminal. Klekamp had said that the courtesy cars were "trading on" the airport by parking in front of the terminal without paying for the privilege.

He said taxi drivers were soliciting passengers inside the terminal by "hawking" for cab customers.

Hogs Post Small Gain

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Hogs turned in a marginal gain on the Omaha livestock Wednesday, while cattle slumped after two good days, mainly because of local packers procured their close-up kill needs Monday and Tuesday.

The day's hog run was estimated at about 3,000 head.

After a slow opening, barrows and gilts turned moderately active.

There were about 4,700 cattle and calves on offer.

Slaughter steers and heifers saw moderate activity, trending 50-cents to $1.00 lower, while cows were called steady to 50-cents off.

Week-Long Stamp Ends

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market halted a week-long decline with a mild technical upturn in moderate trading Wednesday.

the past six sessions, posted a 1.15 gain to 989.44.

Advances outdistanced declines by about a 7-6 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Big Board volume totalled

18.35 million shares, against 18.15 million Tuesday.

The market registered little reaction either way to the government's report at the opening that its consumer price index rose .5 per cent in June.

Anti-Mobile Home Laws Successfully Challenged

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

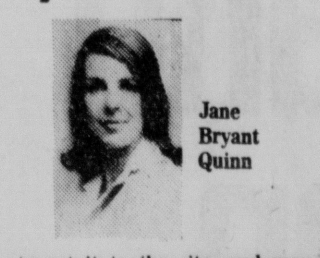

New York — The time will come when owners of single-family homes can no longer keep mobile homes out of the neighborhood.

The governor of Vermont, for example, has just signed a bill ending discrimination against mobile homes. From now on, if a lot there is zoned single-family, it won't make any difference if the house has wheels. In Washington State, Seattle lawyer Russell Austin Jr. has successfully attacked the zoning laws of several communities that kept mobile homes out. Similar actions are occurring elsewhere in the country.

The dream of many mobile home owners who rent space in parks is to have a piece of land of their own. They want to be safe from the fear of eviction, and away from park rules that circumscribe their way of life. They want, in short, the same security of property enjoyed by owners of site-built homes.

But even when they can afford the land, it's hard to find a spot. Towns and counties zone them out, or permit them only on rental mobile-home parks. "We had a case in Colorado where a man was living in a real shack," Nancy White, an official of the American Mobilehome Association told me. "When he got rid of the shack and bought a new, $10,000 mobile home, the county came out and told him to get rid of it."

Mobile home owners are defensive about their reputation as "trailer trash." The wheels of a mobile home are used only to get it to the site, and may never be seen again.

As much as possible, the units are being joined together (called doublewide), they may provide as much as 1,900 square feet of living space — enough for the house to include three comfortable bedrooms, two baths and a den. With the new federal standards for mobile-home construction — the first-ever national building code — mobiles should be more sturdy build, and last longer.

A lot of people hate the look of mobile homes, but there are millions who love them. Probably their most lovable feature is price. At $44,000, today's average-priced new home is beyond the reach of the average wage earner. But he can get a nice mobile home for $12,000 to $15,000. Add in the price of a lot (if available), a foundation, and sewer, water and electrical hookups, and he can set up housekeeping for $25,000 or less.

Mobile home manufacturers want to discontinue its unprofitable limousine service to devote itself to the profitable limousine service. The airport of dropping that service to start an air freight business.

The company already runs an air cargo business, Lincoln Air Freight, along with its limousine service. John Klekamp, director of the service, said the com-estimate that 60% of the new mobile homes sold are put on private land. But it's mostly in rural areas, where there's no zoning. If cities and suburbs accept mobile-home subdivisions, it's likely to be along highways or other spots where owners of regular homes are loathe to live.

Dealers say that the squeeze on regular housing is bringing a more affluent customer into their showrooms — the family making around $15,000, rather than retirees or young-marrieds who get only $7,000 or $8,000. Higher-income families tend to buy double wides, which they hope to live in permanently. These buyers are particularly incensed at zoning laws that discriminate against them.

Some mobile home parks sell developed lots instead of renting them out. But it's not enough to meet demand. In some places, residents in rental parks have bought the owner out and switched to condominium or cooperative ownership.

But ownership parks aren't the final answer. Mobile-home tenants' associations are bombarding state legislatures with demands that they be treated like any other homeowner, with the right to buy property and live in a house that meets the local requirement for square feet of living space. Their lawyers are at work, too, challenging exclusionary zoning.

If you hate mobile homes, perhaps you ought to take another look. One of these days, there may be one next door.

Hogs After Small Gain

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Hogs turned in a marginal gain on the Omaha livestock Wednesday, while cattle slumped after two good days, mainly because many local packers procured their close-up kill needs Monday and Tuesday.

The day's hog run was estimated at about 3,000 head.

After a slow opening, barrows and gilts trended moderately active.

There were about 4,700 cattle and calves on offer.

Slaughter steers and heifers saw moderate activity, trending 50-cents to $1.00 lower, while cows were called steady to 50-cents off.

San Francisco — Lot of summer quail on our summer-brown hillsides now. A covey started across the road in front of the car, and I thought they'd had it. There was no time to stop.

There were 10 fluffy chicks. Mama in the lead. Papa bringing up the rear, keeping an eye out for stray cats. The hen gave the warning cry. The chicks split right and left. Jack-be-nimble. Just like they taught you in basic training.

When I looked back the hen was getting them into formation again.

Quail chicks are born basically trained. React automatically to the hen sergeant's whistle: "C'mon! C'mon! Shake it up!"

These are the barefoot days. Though not as treacherous as when I was walking through the mine fields of boyhood.

None of today's kids ever heard of lockjaw. What modern miracle times!

Lockjaw was what you got when you stepped on a nail. All the doctors in the world couldn't save you.

We warned younger boys: "Look, kid, don't ever step on a nail. You'll get lockjaw."

What was lockjaw? "Your jaw locks shut, and they can't even pry it open with a crowbar. You starve to death!"

When we went barefoot, Grum Jack the Reaper sharpened his scythe.

The great cat rescue took place last week. All of the neighborhood is talking about it. The youngest girl and her pal burst into the house screaming: "There's a cat trapped down the storm drain!"

I said: "Show me." I spent a lot of my journalistic life reporting troubled cats. "Cat up a telephone pole," said the editor. "Firemen are on the way. Get out there. Phone in every half hour."

Well, there was a cat down there all right. I could hear it meowing. There's an opening in the curb so the rain can run off. Why any cat would jump in there is beyond imagination.

On top of the storm drain there's a heavy round iron lid. By this time we had gathered enough young rescuers to get a man off Mount Everest. Finally, somebody came with a crowbar. We pried the top off. A 12-year-old girl volunteer climbed in and got the cat.

It turned out to be a gray kitten with a white face and white paws. About two months old. Couldn't have been there long. No worse for wear.

The cat was immediately adopted, smothered with crooning love — "poor little kitty" — and named Trapper. Which I amended to Trapper Vic. In honor of the great Trader Vic.

I said: "It's my idea to open a very posh cat restaurant."

People who own cats are mad about them. They spend $102 million a year on cat food. I imagine cat people would welcome an elegant cat restaurant where they could take kitty to dinner. Chopped liver. Quail on toast.

But I don't suppose anything will come of it. And for me it will be work, work, work as usual.

San Francisco — Lot of summer quail on our summer-brown hillsides now. A covey started across the road in front of the car, and I thought they'd had it. There was no time to stop.

There were 10 fluffy chicks. Mama in the lead. Papa bringing up the rear, keeping an eye out for stray cats. The hen gave the warning cry. The chicks split right and left. Jack-be-nimble. Just like they taught you in basic training.

When I looked back the hen was getting them into formation again.

Quail chicks are born basically trained. React automatically to the hen sergeant's whistle: "C'mon! C'mon! Shake it up!"

These are the barefoot days. Though not as treacherous as when I was walking through the mine fields of boyhood.

None of today's kids ever heard of lockjaw. What modern miracle times!

Lockjaw was what you got when you stepped on a nail. All the doctors in the world couldn't save you.

We warned younger boys: "Look, kid, don't ever step on a nail. You'll get lockjaw."

What was lockjaw? "Your jaw locks shut, and they can't even pry it open with a crowbar. You starve to death!"

When we went barefoot, Grim Jack the Reaper sharpened his scythe.

Cagers Victors, Enter Semifinals

MONTREAL (UPI) — Adrian Dantley and Scott May combined for 53 points Wednesday night to lead the United States basketball team in a second-half surge for a 112-93 victory over Yugoslavia to become the first team to claim a semifinal berth in the Olympic competition.

The Americans overcame severe first-half foul problems at the center position and a four-point intermission deficit as Dantley and May attacked the second half with fire in their hearts and the gold medal in their eyes.

The United States ran off four straight baskets at the start of the second half to take a 59-55 lead, and the lead changed hands twice before May hit a pair of free throws with 15:38 left to give the Americans the lead for good at 64-63.

Those free throws began a string of eight straight points as Dantley added a basket, and May another to push the lead to seven. The Yugoslavians pulled back to within one at 76-75 over the next four minutes with Drazen Dalipagic and Mirza Delibasic each scoring three baskets.

New, Improved Colts

"Okay I'll admit it. The exhibition game between the Baltimore Colts and Atlanta Falcons last summer in Lincoln was not an exciting game," said Colts' promotions director Lennie Moore.

"But there's no doubt that this year's game between the Cleveland Browns and us will be a more exciting and wide open game," said Moore, who was enshrined in Pro Football's Hall of Fame last summer.

The exhibition tilt to help the Nebraska Athletic department fund, is slated for July 31 in Memorial Stadium at 2 p.m. Tickets are available from the NU ticket office, the National Bank of Commerce and Brandeis stores in Lincoln and Omaha.

The Colts lost to the Falcons in a 10-3 yawner last year but went on to qualify for the playoffs. They lost the American Conference championship game to the Pittsburgh Steelers in a game that wasn't decided until the final moments of the contest.

"We're almost the same team throughout that we finished with last year," Moore said of the Colts. "With the exception of Bill Olds at fullback, the other 21 starting positions should probably be the same as we played in that championship game."

Olds, a former Nebraska fullback, was lost to the Seattle Seahawks in the NFL's expansion draft. According to Moore, who was in Lincoln Wednesday morning, Roosevelt Leaks, a former Texas all-American, is the top candidate to fill in the fullback position. Leaks played against Nebraska in the 1973 Cotton Bowl.

Turnaround

The Colts did a complete turnaround from a disastrous 1974 season in which they won just two games, to the 1975 season when they improved their win total by eight games.

"With the amazing growth of quarterback Bert Jones and defensive people like all-pro tackle John Dutton (former NU standout), we can acclaim this year's Colts the same way we did the old Johnny Unitas teams," said Moore who played for Baltimore for 11 years.

Moore pointed out that just as the Colts made a big move last year and surprised many teams, the Browns could do the same this year.

"Cleveland finished very strong last year," said Moore. "And this year they have another 4.4-second speedster named Pruitt in the backfield." The first Pruitt, Greg, a former Oklahoma standout, gave the Browns life in the backfield they hadn't seen the likes of since Jimmy Brown and Bobby Mitchell retired.

The new Pruitt, named Mike, is a 217-pound fullback, who could be the best thing to come out of Purdue since Otis Armstrong, according to Moore.

"Cleveland also got receiver coach Raymond Berry from Detroit this year," said Moore. Berry, another former Colt standout, will be coaching the likes of Paul Warfield, recently reacquired from the WFL, and some other top receivers. And with quarterback Mike Phipps, they'll be throwing a lot."

Old Rivalry

"We have an old rivalry with the Browns dating back to when Weeb Ewbank, who once coached the Colts, was coaching against his former mentor Paul Brown," said Moore. "That carried over to when Don Shula, present Miami Dolphins coach, took over the Colts after assisting Brown at Cleveland too."

"Last year we were lucky to put any attack together at all when we played in Lincoln," said Moore. "Ted Marchibroda was in his first year and we didn't even know who our No. 1 player would be."

The Colts are coming into Lincoln this year with the second highest scoring team in the NFL last year; Lydell Mitchell, the first Colt to rush for more than 1,000 yards; a promising defense which includes Lincolnte Dutton, Lloyd Mumphord, Jim Cheyanski and Jackie Wallace. Added to that corps are hopefuls like Ken Novak, 6-7, 270-pound rookie defensive tackle Ron Lee, Sanders Silver, and former Colorado fullback Kim Jones.

"I can tell right now it's going to be one hell of a game with hard hitting, played wide open and with everything a fan expects of pro football," said Moore. "If both teams play as well as they did at the end of last year, the fans will be in for a real treat."

time, I wasn't in the market for another. Bill saw the chance for something less formal.

While other Shrine Bowl players sprinted to the cooler lockers or walked under a shade tree with their girlfriends, Bill wanted to spend some rare free time with his family. We talked for five minutes, maybe 10.

MONTREAL (AP) — Nadia Comaneci, the tiny gymnast who has been giving the big Olympic performances, will compete Thursday in the women's individual apparatus finals as ABC-TV's coverage of the Summer Games continues.

ABC will televise 3½ hours of the Games, from 6:30 to 10 p.m., CDT, plus a 15-minute wrap-up.

Aunt Priscilla To Try Again

I don't know if I like this start of the Lincoln races at Ak-Sar-Ben.

My two darlings Wednesday finished far back — I guess they aren't used to this big track or something. My Greg Ness tried so hard but ran way back and Always Remember wasn't much better.

Aunt Priscilla
Loses $4

But you can't live in the past. My $56 spree fund is now at $52 so I still have a lot of time left to win with my sweeties.

On Thursday, I'm going to put my $2 win tickets on Duke of Winsor in the eighth and on Kaintuk in the ninth. I'm sure they'll do much better.

By CHUCK SINCLAIR

Omahan Lynn Merwald completed her initial step as a conquerer of champions when she sidelined four-time Nebraska women's state match-play golf champion Dorothy Schwartzkopf 2 and 1 at Hillcrest Country Club Wednesday.

Now Merwald, a 21-year-old Arizona State student, faces another champion, Schwartzkopf's daughter Christie, in Thursday's semifinals.

Also a winner of four titles, Christie has reached the finals seven out of the 11 years she's competed, with her most recent championship coming in 1973 at Hastings' Lochland Country Club.

In the top half of the brackets, North Platte High School junior Valerie Skinner and University of Nebraska golfer Nan Circo of Omaha also advanced to Thursday's semis.

Skinner scored a relatively easy 5 and 4 triumph over Deb Benish of Norfolk while Circo won in convincing fashion 7 and 5, over Lincoln's Jane Ganser.

Christie's win over Aurora's Jan Stanard, making her the only one of four entered past champions to advance, was hard-fought despite the final 6 and 4 score.

Stanard, making a strong bid to oust the former champion on the front nine, had Schwartzkopf in unfamiliar surroundings, one hole down after the first five.

"I don't like to be down," Christie said. "When I got down after five holes, it scared me. It got my adrenaline going."

Schwartzkopf won the sixth and seventh holes, tied eight and nine, but won the next five to close out Stanard, who at 15 years old, was the youngest competitor in the championship flight.

The Stanard-Schwartzkopf match was a bit unusual as only the eighth and ninth holes were tied in the 14 holes played.

"We traded three putts there at the beginning," Christie said. "First I three-putt for her on No. 2 and she wins the hole and she three-putts for me on No. 3."

"With so many different holes won," she added, "I think that's probably why our scores were higher today than the last two days."

After taking a triple-bogey seven losing the fifth hole, however, Christie played through 14 even par.

If Christie should get beat by Merwald, and Circo could get past Skinner, it would be an all Omaha finale on Friday. But it would be the first time in the last nine years that Lincoln wasn't represented.

Although Christie would have liked to have met Dorothy in the semis, she admitted she didn't feel too badly.

"She played well," Christie said of her mother. "So I really don't feel too badly. And I think she's happy with the way she played. She didn't just lay down, she got beat by a good player."

While those in the championship flight had their fate decided, two of the former champions eliminated Tuesday, won consolation matches Wednesday, and will face each other Thursday in the consolation semis.

Five-time winner Jean Hyland of Lincoln dispatched Omaha's Sharon Slattery 3 and 2 while Betty Marchese of Omaha defeated Beatrice's Larie Glase, 2 and 1.

Nadia In Elite Olympian Class

MONTREAL (UPI) — Her name is Nadia Comaneci, the 14-year-old daughter of a poor machinist from Romania, and these Olympics are hers, as surely as others have belonged to Jesse Owens and Mark Spitz.

She's the only gymnast in Olympic history who can be called "perfect" without exaggeration.

While the men swimmers from the United States were winning two more gold medals and setting yet another world record, and while the U.S. basketball team survived another threat to reach the semifinals, Comaneci rewrote Olympic history Wednesday with an incredible and awesome show of gymnastics wizardry.

Twice the 88-pound sprite of a girl earned perfect 10.0 scores from the judges, setting off tumultuous displays of cheering and screaming from a sellout crowd of 16,000 in the historic old Montreal Forum.

They were her fourth and fifth perfect routines of the Games.

Comaneci won the title in the gymnastics all-around competition with 79.275 of a possible 80 points, a record, and became the youngest gold medal winner ever in the Olympics.

She is also ahead in the race for two more gold medals Thursday when competition will be completed on individual pieces of apparatus, and is a close third in the two others. She could possibly win all four, for a total of five, and that would be another record because only one woman, Holland's great track star Fanny Blankers-Koen in 1948 at London, ever has won as many as four gold medals in one Olympics.

Already, United States and Romanian gymnastics officials are talking about a tour by Comaneci and her teammates in the U.S. later this year. Such a tour was taken last year by a Russian troupe featuring Olga Korbut and drew sellouts everywhere including Madison Square Garden in New York.

Ironically, Korbut, who captivated a worldwide television audience at the 1972 Olympics in Munich (where she won two gold medals), much as Comaneci is doing this year, was just another face in the Forum Wednesday. She finished fifth, and at the end of the competition Russian coach Larisa Latynina was complaining about the way the judges were scoring.

"There is no question that the judging has been rather emotional this time," said Latynina.

For her part, Comaneci hopes to show the Russians a thing or two more when the Olympics are held in Moscow four years from now.

"I will try to perfect my techniques and learn new things," she said, while also taking a swipe at the Soviets and saying she was neither impressed nor inspired by what Korbut did four years ago.

"I do not appreciate Soviet gymnastics," Comaneci said. "I'm not in a position to appreciate Russian gymnastics at the Olympics."

The United States men swimmers, meanwhile, were running their string of gold medal victories to seven—although for once, one of them was not achieved in record time.

Matt Vogel, a sophomore at the University of Tennessee, paced a 1-2-3 sweep—the third for the U.S. men—in the 100-meter butterfly, winning in 54.35 seconds. Joe Bottom was second and Gary Hall, who carried the flag in last Saturday's opening ceremony, third. The time was 8-100ths of a second off the world record, the last one still held by Spitz.

An 800-meter freestyle relay team of Mike Bruner, Steve Furniss, John Naber and Jim Montgomery, won in 7:23.22, knocking more than seven seconds off the record that had been established by a makeshift U.S. relay team in the semifinals earlier Wednesday.

Lanny Bassham of Bedford, Tex., became the second American to win in shooting, winning the small bore rifle three positions, but then he almost refused to accept the gold medal. He thought Margaret Murdock of Topeka, Kans., who finished second with the same score he had, should also have been awarded a gold medal.

Two American boxers also won second round bouts Wednesday night: Featherweight Davey Lee Armstrong of Puyallup, Wash., the 1975 Pan-American Games champion, defeated Anatoly Volkov of the USSR, and lightweight Howard Davis of Glen Cove, N.Y., came off the floor following a first round knockdown to decision Yukio Segawa of Japan.

Ulrike Richter of East Germany won the women's 100-meter backstroke in 1:01.83.

Sportswriter Recalls Holmes As Concerned Athlete, Person

I'll be the first to admit my perception of Bill Holmes is prejudiced.

He had just finished scrimmaging in the South Shrine Bowl camp at Crete last summer. It was hot outside and he was exhausted. But Bill was the type who overlooked the elements.

"Mr. York," he said, "do you have a few extra minutes before you head back to Lincoln?"

"Sure," I said.

"I'd like to have you meet my parents and little sister. This is my dad, Dale, my mother, Martha, and my little sister, Diane. She's always answering the phone when you call. I give her a bad time sometimes, but I'm kinda proud of her."

I had written a feature story on Bill the week before. At that time, I wasn't in the market for another. Bill saw the chance for something less formal.

While other Shrine Bowl players sprinted to the cooler lockers or walked under a shade tree with their girlfriends, Bill wanted to spend some rare free time with his family. We talked for five minutes, maybe 10.

Football was part of the conversation, but so was Bill's affinity for modern art and how he liked to cook. When he talked about taking home ec at East High, he didn't laugh about it. He told how much he enjoyed it and learned from it.

That conversation meant a lot to me before Bill Holmes, at age 19, died in his sleep Sunday because of an enlarged heart.

I remember getting into the car and starting the short trip from Crete to Lincoln. I thought about how lucky I was to watch a high school athlete's development and how lucky I was there are athletes like Bill Holmes.

Some athletes, many in fact, look down their noses at a prep sportswriter. You can sense their uneasiness. They don't want to be identified with you because they're convinced you have a grudge against their school.

Bill was just the opposite. He enjoyed the companionship of a sportswriter. More than once, he would sit down and talk with Conde Sargent or me and ask some interesting questions point blank.

I've also been to Shrine Bowl camps and Lincoln high school practices where athletes did not want to cooperate for the camera because, again, they thought you represented embarrassing identification.

Not Bill Holmes. Last summer, when Dave Sittler was organizing a picture of Lincoln players in the South Shrine camp, Holmes was the leader.

He knew what Dave wanted—a Larry Csonka-Jim Knick type of pose underneath the goalposts. "I'll be Csonka. I'll be Csonka," Bill said as he hustled into position. Playing the role was not beneath his dignity.

As much as he liked the lighter side of situations, Bill never tried to hide his seriousness. Football meant a lot to him. Like other pursuits, he approached it with maturity. His coaches relished that quality.

His teammates must have, too. Bill captained East's unbeaten 1974 state championship team and captained the South in last summer's Shrine Bowl.

"I think he earned his teammates' respect because they could see how hard he worked for a goal," East football coach Lee Zentic said.

"Sometimes, Bill was not the prettiest or the most graceful or the most coordinated athlete on the football field, but he always got the job done somehow," added Zentic.

Zentic also admired Holmes' honesty.

"I remember when he was a senior," recalled Zentic. "We had played poorly against Papillion and had had a couple of bad practices. I was upset and called Bill aside."

"What's the deal?" asked Zentic. "Here we are undefeated and we're going downhill. I want to know why."

"Coach," asked Holmes, "do you want me to be honest?" Given the green light, Holmes said: "Coach, you need to kick some rear ends out here. You quit working us hard and we quit working hard for you. You've gotten a little lazy with us and we've gotten a little lazy with you."

Zentic asks: "How many high school kids would have had the honesty or the insight to say that? Bill Holmes is the only one I can think of. You know something? He was right. I changed my approach and it made all the difference in the world."

It's memories like those which help friends and family accentuate the positive in time of death.

Wednesday's funeral was a tough emotional experience to swallow, but you must admire Holmes' dad, who said: "We feel blessed to have had Bill 19 years."

That's solidarity. That's perspective. That's why Bill Holmes lived the positive life he lived.

Cagers Victors, Enter Semifinals

MONTREAL (UPI) — Adrian Dantley and Scott May combined for 53 points Wednesday night to lead the United States basketball team in a second-half surge for a 112-93 victory over Yugoslavia to become the first team to claim a semifinal berth in the Olympic competition.

The Americans overcame severe first-half foul problems at the center position and a four-point intermission deficit as Dantley and May attacked the second half with fire in their hearts and the gold medal in their eyes.

The United States ran off four straight baskets at the start of the second half to take a 59-55 lead, and the lead changed hands twice before May hit a pair of free throws with 15:38 left to give the Americans the lead for good at 64-63.

Those free throws began a string of eight straight points as Dantley added a basket, and May another to push the lead to seven. The Yugoslavians pulled back to within one at 76-75 over the next four minutes with Drazen Dalipagic and Mirza Delibasic each scoring three baskets.

New, Improved Colts

"Okay I'll admit it. The exhibition game between the Baltimore Colts and Atlanta Falcons last summer in Lincoln was not an exciting game," said Colts' promotions director Lennie Moore.

"But there's no doubt that this year's game between the Cleveland Browns and we will be a more exciting and wide open game," said Moore, who was enshrined in Pro Football's Hall of Fame last summer.

The exhibition fight to help the Nebraska Athletic department fund, is slated for July 31 in Memorial Stadium at 2 p.m. Tickets are available from the NU ticket office, the National Bank of Commerce and Brandeis stores in Lincoln and Omaha.

The Colts lost to the Falcons in a 10-3 yawner last year but went on to qualify for the playoffs. They lost the American Conference championship game to the Pittsburgh Steelers in a game that wasn't decided until the final moments of the contest.

"We're almost the same team throughout that we finished with last year," Moore said of the Colts. "With the exception of Bill Olds at fullback, the other 21 starting positions should probably be the same as we played in that championship game."

Olds, a former Nebraska fullback, was lost to the Seattle Seahawks in the NFL's expansion draft. According to Moore, who was in Lincoln Wednesday morning, Roosevelt Leaks, a former Texas all-American, is the top candidate to fill in the fullback position. Leaks played against Nebraska in the 1973 Cotton Bowl.

Turnaround

The Colts did a complete turnaround from a disastrous 1974 season in which they won just two games, to the 1975 season when they improved their win total by eight games.

"With the amazing growth of quarterback Bert Jones and defensive people like all-pro tackle John Dutton (former NU standout), we can acclaim this year's Colts the same way we did the old Johnny Unitas teams," said Moore who played for Baltimore for 11 years.

Moore pointed out that just as the Colts made a big move last year and surprised many teams, the Browns could do the same this year.

"Cleveland finished very strong last year," said Moore. "And this year they have another 4.4-second speedster named Pruitt in the backfield." The first Pruitt, Greg, a former Oklahoma standout, gave the Browns life in the backfield they hadn't seen the likes of since Jimmy Brown and Bobby Mitchell retired.

The new Pruitt, named Mike, is a 217-pound fullback, who could be the best thing to come out of Purdue since Otis Armstrong, according to Moore.

"Cleveland also got receiver coach Raymond Berry from Detroit this year," said Moore. Berry, another former Colt standout, will be coaching the likes of Paul Warfield, recently reacquired from the WFL, and some other top receivers. And with quarterback Mike Philp, they'll be throwing a lot."

Old Rivalry

"We have an old rivalry with the Browns dating back to when Webb Ewbank, who once coached the Colts, was coaching against his former mentor Paul Brown," said Moore. "That carried over to when Don Shula, present Miami Dolphins coach, took over the Colts after assisting Brown at Cleveland too."

"Last year we were lucky to put any attack together at all when we played in Lincoln," said Moore. "Ted Marchbroda was in his first year and we didn't even know who our No. 1 player would be."

The Colts are coming into Lincoln this year with the second highest scoring team in the NFL last year; Lydell Mitchell, the first Colt to rush for more than 1,000 yards; a promising defense which includes Lincolnite Dutton, Lloyd Mumford, Jim Cheyanski and Jackie Wallace. Added to that corps are hopefuls like Ken Novak, 6-7, 276-pound rookie defensive tackle Ron Lee, Sanders Shiver, and former Colorado fullback Kim Jones.

"I can tell right now it's going to be one hell of a game with hard hitting, played wide open and with everything a fan expects of pro football," said Moore. "If both teams play as well as they did at the end of last year, the fans will be in for a real treat."

Aunt Priscilla To Try Again

I don't know if I like this start of the Lincoln races at Ak-Sar-Ben.

My two darlings Wednesday finished far back — I guess they aren't used to this big track or something. My Greg Ness tried so hard but ran way back and Always Remember wasn't much better.

Aunt Priscilla
Loses $4

But you can't live in the past. My $56 spree fund is now at $52 so I still have a lot of time left to win with my sweeties.

On Thursday, I'm going to put my $2 win tickets on Duke of Wisner in the eighth and on Kaintuk in the ninth. I'm sure they'll do much better.

I remember getting into the car and starting the short trip from Crete to Lincoln. I thought about how lucky I was to watch a high school athlete's development and how lucky I was there are athletes like Bill Holmes.

Some athletes, many in fact, look down their noses at a prep sportswriter. You can sense their uneasiness. They don't want to be identified with you because they're convinced you have a grudge against their school.

Merwald Wins To Advance In Match Play

By CHUCK SINCLAIR

Omaha Lynn Merwald completed her initial step as a conquerer of champions when she sidelined four-time Nebraska women's state match-play golf champion Dorothy Schwartzkopf 2 and 1 at Hillcrest Country Club Wednesday.

Now Merwald, a 21-year-old Arizona State student, faces another champion, Schwartzkopf's daughter Christie, in Thursday's semifinals.

Also a winner of four titles, Christie has reached the finals seven out of the 11 years she's competed, with her most recent championship coming in 1973 at Hastings' Lochland Country Club.

In the top half of the brackets, North Platte High School junior Valerie Skinner and University of Nebraska golfer Nan Circo of Omaha also advanced to Thursday's semis.

Skinner scored a relatively easy 5 and 4 triumph over Deb Benish of Norfolk while Circo won in convincing fashion 7 and 5, over Lincoln's Jane Auser.

Christie's win over Auser's Jan Stanard, making her the only one of four entered past champions to advance, was hard-fought despite the final 6 and 4 score.

Stanard, making a strong bid to oust the former champion on the front nine, had Schwartzkopf in unfamiliar surroundings, one hole down after the first five.

"I don't like to be down," Christie said. "When I got down after five holes, it scared me. It got my adrenalin going."

Schwartzkopf won the sixth and seventh holes, tied eight and nine, but won the next five to close out Stanard, who at 15 years old, was the youngest competitor in the championship flight.

The Stanard-Schwartzkopf match was a bit unusual as only the eighth and ninth holes were tied in the 14 holes played.

"We traded three putts there at the beginning," Christie said. "First I three-putt for her on No. 2 and she wins the hole and she three-putts for me on No. 3."

"With so many different holes won," she added, "I think that's probably why our scores were higher today than the last two days."

After taking a triple-bogey seven losing the fifth hole, however, Christie played through 14 even par.

If Christie should get beat by Merwald, and Circo could beat past Skinner, it would be an all Omaha finale on Friday. But it would be the first time in the last nine years that Lincoln wasn't represented.

Although Christie would have liked to have met Dorothy in the semis, she admitted she didn't feel too badly.

"She played well," Christie said of her mother. "So I really don't feel too badly. And I think she's happy with the way she played. She didn't just lay down, she got beat by a good player."

While those in the championship flight had their fate decided, two of the former champions eliminated Tuesday, won consolation matches Wednesday, and will face each other Thursday in the consolation semis.

Five-time winner Jean Hyland of Lincoln dispatched Omaha's Sharon Slattery 3 and 2 while Betty Marchese of Omaha defeated Beatrice's Larie Glase, 2 and 1.

Nadia In Elite Olympian Class

MONTREAL (UPI) — Her name is Nadia Comaneci, the 14-year-old daughter of a poor machinist from Romania, and these Olympics are hers, as surely as others have belonged to Jesse Owens and Mark Spitz.

She's the only gymnast in Olympic history who can be called "perfect" without exaggeration.

While the men swimmers at the United States were winning two more gold medals and setting yet another world record, and while the U.S. basketball team survived another threat to reach the semifinals, Comaneci rewrote Olympic history Wednesday with an incredible and awesome show of gymnastics wizardry.

Twice the 88-pound spry of a girl earned perfect 10.0 scores from the judges, setting off tumultuous displays of cheering and screaming from a sellout crowd of 16,000 in the historic old Montreal Forum.

They were her fourth and fifth perfect routines of the Games.

Comaneci won the title in the gymnastics all-around competition with 79.275 of a possible 80 points, a record, and became the youngest gold medal winner ever in the Olympics.

She is also ahead in the race for two more gold medals Thursday when competition will be completed on individual pieces of apparatus, and is a close third in the two others. She could possibly win all four, for a total of five, and that would be another record because only one woman, Holland's great track star Fanny Blankers-Koen in 1948 at London, ever has won as many as four gold medals in one Olympics.

Already, United States and Romanian gymnastics officials are talking about a tour by Comaneci and her teammates in the U.S. later this year. Such a tour was taken last year by a Russian troupe featuring Olga Korbut and drew sellouts everywhere including Madison Square Garden in New York.

Ironically, Korbut, who captivated a worldwide television audience at the 1972 Olympics in Munich (where she won two gold medals), much as Comaneci is doing this year, was just another face, and at the end of the competition Russian coach Larisa Latynina was complaining about the way the judges were scoring.

"There is no question that the judging has been rather emotional this time," said Latynina.

For her part, Comaneci hopes to show the Russians a thing or two more when the Olympics are held in Moscow four years from now.

"I will try to perfect my techniques and learn new things," she said, while also taking a swipe at the Soviets and saying she was neither impressed nor inspired by what Korbut did four years ago.

"I do not appreciate Soviet gymnastics," Comaneci said. "I'm not in a position to appreciate Russian gymnastics as the swimmers."

The United States men gymnasts, meanwhile, were running their string of gold medal victories to seven—although for once, one of them was not achieved in record time.

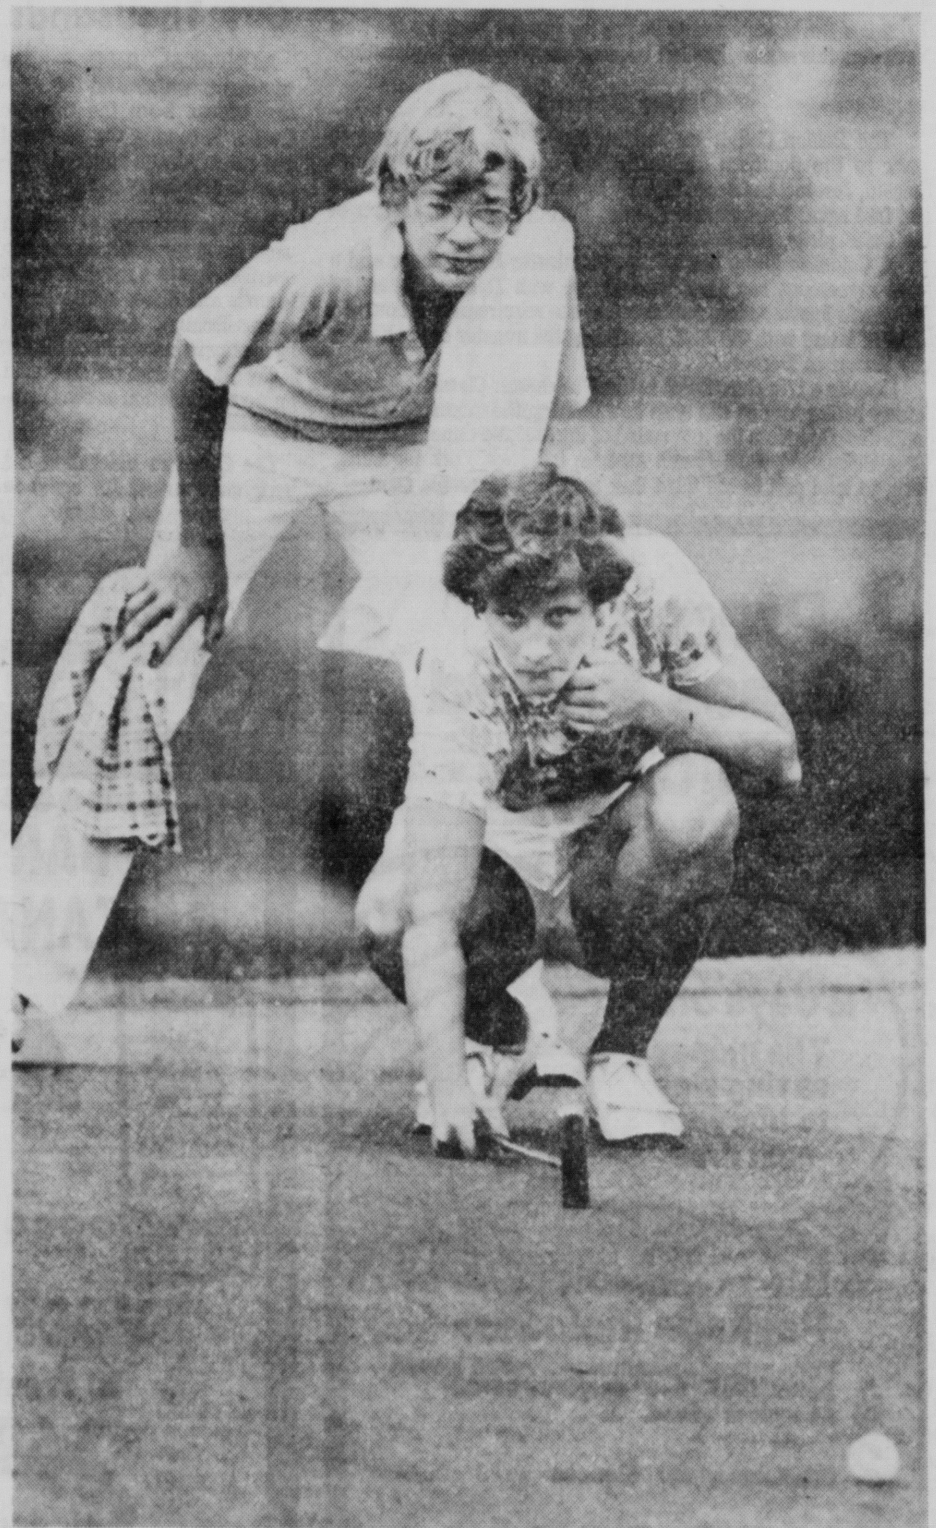

Matt Vogel, a sophomore at the University of Tennessee, paced a 1-2-3 sweep—the third of the U.S. men—in the 100-meter butterfly, winning in 54:35 seconds. Joe Bottom was second and Gary Hall, who carried the flag in last Saturday's opening ceremony, third. The time was 8:10ths of a second off the world record, the last one still held by Spitz.

An 800-meter freestyle relay team of Mike Bruner, Steve Furniss, John Naber and Jim Montgomery, won in 7:23.22, knocking more than seven seconds off the record that had been established by a makeshift U.S. relay team in the semifinals earlier Wednesday.

Lanny Bassham of Bedford, Tex., became the second American to win in shooting, winning the small bore rifle three positions, but then he almost refused to accept the gold medal. He thought Margaret Murdoch of Topeka, Kans., who finished second with the same score he had, should also have been awarded a gold medal.

Two American boxers also won second round bouts Wednesday night: Featherweight Davey Lee Armstrong of Puyallup, Wash., the 1975 Pan-American Games champion, defeated Anatoly Volkov of the USSR, and lightweight Howard Davis of Glen Cove, N.Y., came off the floor following a first round knockdown to decision Yukio Segawa of Japan.

Unlike Richter of East Germany won the women's 100-meter backstroke in 1:01.83.

Sportswriter Recalls Holmes As Concerned Athlete, Person

I'll be the first to admit my perception of Bill Holmes is prejudiced.

He had just finished scrimmaging in the South Shrine Bowl camp at Crete last summer. It was hot outside and he was exhausted. But Bill was the type who overlooked the elements.

"Mr. York," he said, "do you have a few extra minutes before you head back to Lincoln?"

"Sure," I said. "I'd like to have you meet my parents and little sister. This is my dad, Dale, my mother, Martha, and my little sister, Diane. She's always answering the phone when you call. I give her a bad time sometimes, but I'm kinda proud of her."

I had written a feature story on Bill the week before. At that

Kuhn Defends Decision

Baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn defended before Congress his nullification of the sale of three Oakland A's players as in the best interests of the sport.

At the same hearing, owner Charles O. Finley of the A's claimed that Kuhn's nullification of the sale was an effort to drive him out of baseball.

Kuhn said, "If the best interests are to be served, you have to look for the overall benefits for the game and not for the individual."

"Where you have multi-million deals and pennants delivered, the integrity of the game will be undermined," he said.

Kansas City (AP) — Von Joshua and Tim Johnson collected two hits apiece as the Milwaukee Brewers, aided by six Kansas City errors, whipped the Royals 5-0 in a sloppily played baseball game Wednesday night.

Identification Troubles?

Does identification of the fish you just caught sometimes stump you? It can make a difference you know.

For instance, when you are catching a bunch of nice white bass, the limit is 25 daily, and you head to the dock only to find out from the game warden standing there that you have taken 25 small striped bass. The striped bass limit is two. It can be a costly error.

These two species are commonly mistaken in a few of the Nebraska lakes now with both kinds of fish. It's even worse when you consider both fish are of similar body characteristics in that the lower jaw projects, both have body stripes, both have separated dorsal fins and both have a silvery appearance, with small stripes, that is.

The striped, of course, is more streamlined and, when compared to a white bass, the similarities jump out at you. There is also a difference in that the striped has teeth on its tongue and the white bass has evenly graduated anal spines.

A helpful aid for those who have trouble might be to pick up one of the Barcum House "Fish Ident-I-Cards." These new products are for the guy who can't figure out what's what but should know.

The 4x6-inch cards are laminated in heavy-duty plastic to withstand banging around in a boat and getting wet. They fit easily in a jacket pocket or in the tackle box.

The eight-card set covers the pike family, sunfish family, crappie and white bass, Great Lakes trout and salmon, Pacific trout and salmon, trout family, perch and walleye, and the catfish family.

If you're one of those fishermen who might make an unintentional mistake on the white bass or stripers, or even in identifying the members of the catfish family (there is a take difference in Nebraska here also) then the "Fish Ident-I-Cards" might just be for you.

What's New?

DuPont's new miracle fiberglass offshoot, Kevlar, is reaching out to more boat manufacturers. The nearly indestructible, lightweight fiber, was first used by Hydra-Sport for power boat construction. Now Skeeter, Stryker and Mackie boat companies are using the fiber. More will likely follow.

The International Association of Fish and Wildlife Agencies have announced the filming of a new television series, "The American Outdoors." According to producer Don Higley of Chicago, it will be something like a "60 Minutes" news-type show on outdoor living, including fishing, hunting, trapping, camping, etc.

The first 26 segments, in 30-minute showings, are now available for local syndication through the IFWA in Washington, D.C. Wally Taber, president of the Outdoor Writers Assn. is the show host.

The Nebraska Game and Parks Commission's August NEBRASKAland will feature a special 16 pages on southwest Nebraska. The magazine's usual superb photography and features on such places as Lake McConaughy, Harlan County Reservoir, Red Willow, Medicine Creek and others should show all Nebraskans the potential of the southwest.

And, finally, for those of us who have trouble seeing in the fog at night, Optonics has introduced Blue Eye Beam, a new emergency trouble light for the car or boat. The light, similar to a Q-Beam light, has a blue filter which is geared to cut through the fog, rain or haze.

Although it's a little early to think about the cold weather months ahead, hunters have a "handy" new item on the market from the people at Scotty. It is a new water-activated handwarmer. The warmer, also coming in hot pad sizes, is odorless and harmless to the user but could keep the duck hunter or cold-weather quail hunter warm with a little water from the canteen.

Gilkes Seeks IOC Approval To Compete

MONTREAL (AP) — Sprinter James Gilkes of Guyana, whose country pulled out of the Olympics with 30 others in a political dispute that has rocked these Games, asked the International Olympic Committee (IOC) Wednesday for permission to compete on his own.

The 23-year-old sprinter, who was entered in the 100-meter and 200-meter dashes, became the first athlete to crack the solid barrier thrown up by black nations protesting New Zealand's sports ties with segregationist South Africa.

Gilkes' attempt to become the first man without a country in Olympic history was the first act of defiance against the boycott.

"I am in excellent shape and I want to compete," said Gilkes, a marketing major at the University of Southern California. "I came here to run and that's what I am asking to do."

In his letter to IOC President Lord Killanin, Gilkes said: "This letter is to request permission to compete in the 21st Olympic Games under the insignia of the IOC or any other designation that you would deem appropriate. I came to Montreal to represent my country, Guyana, which has since withdrawn from the Games. My decision to seek permission to compete is based on personal principles."

Gilkes was expected to be a factor in both short races before his country pulled out of the Games. He has run 100 meters in 10 seconds flat and the 200 in 20 flat. He also ran a wind-aided 19.9 in winning the 1974 national collegiate championship.

His decision to ask to compete was delayed for two days because he was concerned about reprisals against his family in Guyana—his grandmother, mother and two sisters.

"I tried to call the government many times," he said, "but I couldn't get through. They kept saying, 'Call back, call back.' So I gave up and wrote the letter."

The IOC received it letter late Wednesday, after he had attempted unsuccessfully to meet with IOC officials. A spokesman for the IOC said he did not know what action the nine-man executive board would take when it meets Thursday morning.

However, when the boycott started, the IOC issued a statement in which it said it would "keep the door open for any team or athlete to come back into the Games."

Most of Gilkes' teammates left for home after Guyana announced it was leaving Monday.

Connors Wins Easily

WASHINGTON (AP) — Second-seeded Jimmy Connors won easily and third-seeded Arthur Ashe was upset Wednesday in singles matches in the $125,000 Washington Star International tennis tournament.

Play was cut short by poor weather. Among the matches that were postponed was a doubles contest pitting Connors and Ashe against Cliff Richey and Pat Cramer.

Connors moved into the third round as he breezed by Geoff Masters of Australia, 6-0, 6-1. Ashe was eliminated by Australian Dick Crealy, 6-2, 6-3. Ashe was seeded third behind Guillermo Vilas and Connors. Vilas dropped out of the tournament because of an injury.

The fourth-seeded player, Harold Solomon of Silver Spring, Md., also was knocked out of the tournament. He lost to Victor Pecci of Paraguay, 63, 1-6, 7-5.

More than half the seeded players have been eliminated.

Earlier in the day, Tim Gullikson of Dayton, Ohio ousted seventh-seeded Roscoe Tanner of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., 63, 6-4. Tanner was the fourth of the top 10 seeded players to be eliminated.

In other Wednesday matches, Ray Moore of South Africa defeated Cliff Richey of Texas, 6-3, 6-2; Roger Taylor of Great Britain topped John Whittinger of Wisconsin, 1-6, 6-4, 6-4; Ismail El Shafei of Egypt beat Amilio Montano of Mexico, 7-5, 6-4; Steve Krulvitz of Baltimore ousted Tom Gorman of Seattle, 6-1, 6-4; and Brian Fairlie of New Zealand eliminated 10th seeded Wojtek Fibak of Poland, 7-5, 6-1.

In other results, Dick Stockton of Dallas defeated Jorge Andrew of Venezuela, 6-3, 6-3, and Raul Ramirez of Mexico topped Jeff Austin of California, 6-2, 6-3.

All-Star Cage Camps Open

The South and North All-Star basketball teams will begin training when camps open Thursday at Kearney State and Wayne State Colleges, respectively.

For the first time in the eight-year history of the basketball contest, the teams will meet twice, first in North Platte on Aug. 5 and then in Lincoln, Aug. 6. The North leads the series, four games to three.

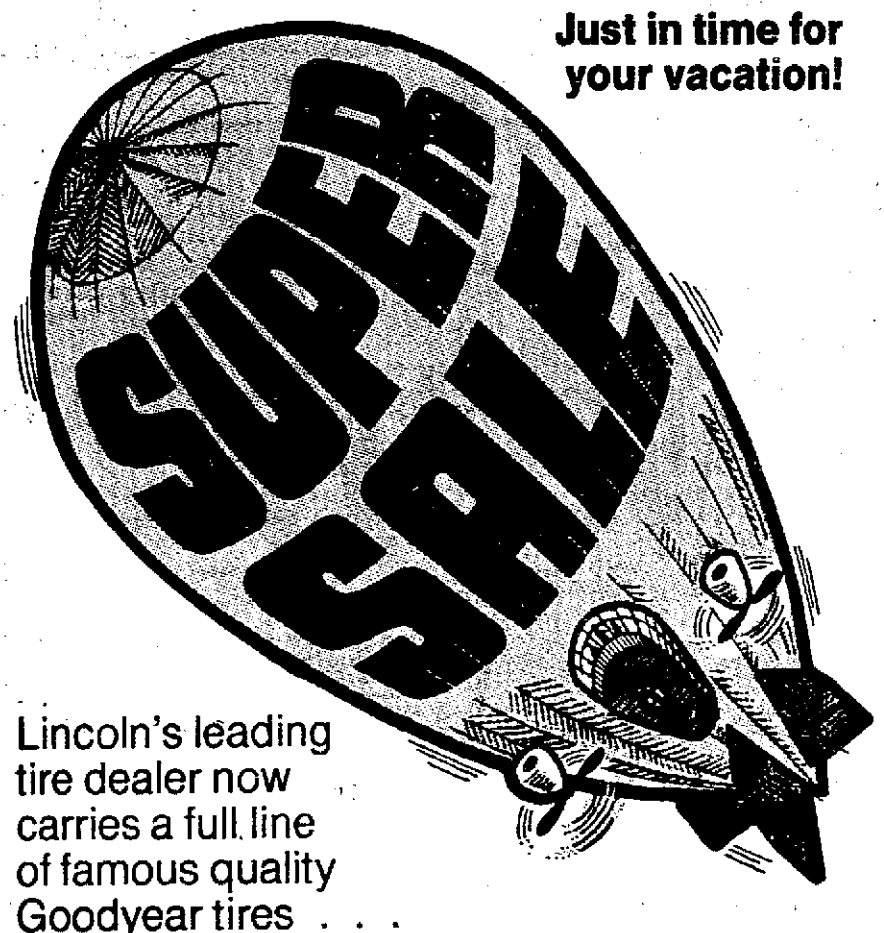

North coach Ken Trubey of Ord anticipates a running attack, while Rod Felix of Seward, coach of the South squad, stressed his team's balance, particularly at guard.

Both coaches plan to stress teamwork throughout the seven days of camp. "We've got to get them to give up the ball to the open man," Felix said. "We've got to sell them that to be successful in this kind of ball game, they will have to be unselfish."

The two Central 10 Conference coaches have scheduled workouts Thursday afternoon shortly after the camps open.

Three-a-day workouts are slated to begin Friday with scrimmages against area collegians scheduled for Sunday and Tuesday nights at both camps. All practice sessions are open to the public.

All-Star Cage Camps Open

The South and North All-Star basketball teams will begin training when camps open Thursday at Kearney State and Wayne State Colleges, respectively.

For the first time in the eight-year history of the basketball contest, the teams will meet twice, first in North Platte on Aug. 5 and then in Lincoln, Aug. 6. The North leads the series, four games to three.

North coach Ken Trubey of Ord anticipates a running attack, while Rod Felix of Seward, coach of the South squad, stressed his team's balance, particularly at guard.

Zoth coaches plan to stress teamwork throughout the seven days of camp. "We've got to get them to give up the ball to the open man," Felix said. "We've got to sell them that to be successful in this kind of ball game, they will have to be unselfish."

The two Central 10 Conference coaches have scheduled workouts Thursday afternoon shortly after the camps open.

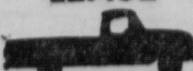

Three-day workouts are slated to begin Friday with scrimmages against area collegians scheduled for Sunday and Tuesday nights at both camps. All practice sessions are open to the public.

Gilkes Seeks IOC Approval To Compete

MONTREAL (AP) — Sprinter James Gilkes of Guyana, whose country pulled out of the Olympics with 30 others in a political dispute that has rocked these Games, asked the International Olympic Committee (IOC) Wednesday for permission to compete on his own.

The 23-year-old sprinter, who was entered in the 100-meter and 200-meter dashes, became the first athlete to crack the solid barrier thrown up by black nations protesting New Zealand's sports ties with segregationist South Africa.

Gilkes' attempt to become the first man without a country in Olympic history was the first act of defiance against the boycott.

"I am in excellent shape and I want to compete," said Gilkes, a marketing major at the University of Southern California. "I came here to run and that's what I am asking to do."

In his letter to IOC President Lord Killanin, Gilkes said:

"This letter is to request permission to compete in the 21st Olympic Games under the insignia of the IOC or any other designation that you would deem appropriate. I came to Montreal to represent my country, Guyana, which has since withdrawn from the Games. "My decision to seek permission to compete is based on personal principles."

Gilkes was expected to be a factor in both short races before his country pulled out of the Games. He has run 100 meters in 10 seconds flat and the 200 in 20 flat. He also ran a wind-aided 19.9 in winning the 1974 national collegiate championship.

His decision to ask to compete was delayed for two days because he was concerned about reprisals against his family in Guyana—his grandmother, mother and two sisters.

"I tried to call the government many times," he said, "but I couldn't get through. They kept saying, 'Call back, call back.' So I gave up and wrote the letter."

The IOC received his letter late Wednesday, after he had attempted unsuccessfully to meet with IOC officials. A spokesman for the IOC said he did not know what action the nine-man executive board would take when it meets Thursday morning.

However, when the boycott started, the IOC issued a statement in which it said it would "keep the door open for any team or athlete to come back into the Games."

Most of Gilkes' teammates left for home after Guyana announced it was leaving Monday.

Connors Wins Easily

WASHINGTON (AP) — Second-seeded Jimmy Connors won easily and third-seeded Arthur Ashe was upset Wednesday in singles matches in the $125,000 Washington Star International tennis tournament.

Play was cut short by poor weather. Among the matches that were postponed was a doubles contest pitting Connors and Ashe against Cliff Richey and Pat Cramer.

Connors moved into the third round as he breezed by Geoff Masters of Australia, 6-0, 6-1. Ashe was eliminated by Australian Dick Crealy, 6-2, 6-3. Ashe was seeded third behind Guillermo Vilas and Connors. Vilas dropped out of the tournament because of an injury.

The fourth-seeded player, Harold Solomon of Silver Spring, Md., also was knocked out of the tournament. He lost to Victor Pecci of Paraguay, 6-3, 1-6, 7-5.

More than half the seeded players have been eliminated.

Earlier in the day, Tim Gulikson of Dayton, Ohio ousted seventh-seeded Roscoe Tanner of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., 6-3, 6-4. Tanner was the fourth of the top 10 seeded players to be eliminated.

In other Wednesday matches, Ray Moore of South Africa defeated Cliff Richey of Texas, 46, 6-3, 6-2; Roger Taylor of Great Britain topped John Whitlinger of Wisconsin, 1-6, 64, 64; Ismail El Shafei of Egypt beat Amilio Montano of Mexico, 7-5, 6-4; Steve Krulvitz of Baltimore ousted Tom Gorman of Seattle, 6-1 6-4; and Brian Fairlie of New Zealand eliminated 10th seeded Wojtek Fibak of Poland, 7-5, 61.

In other results, Dick Stockton of Dallas defeated Jorge Andrew of Venezuela, 6-3, 6-3, and Raul Ramirez of Mexico topped Jeff Austin of California, 6-2, 6-3.

Rain Postpones State Tourney

Beatrice — The Nebraska state semi-pro baseball tournament here was postponed for the third time Wednesday due to rain.

The Lincoln Johnny's v. Lincoln Owens game scheduled for Wednesday night will be played Friday at 6:30 p.m. The Thursday schedule for the tournament will remain the same, with Grand Island Pabst facing Omaha McCann's and North Bend v. Lincoln First Savings.

MONTREAL (AP) — Security is so tight at the headquarters of the Israeli athletes that even the chief rabbi of the Olympic Games couldn't get in to see them.

"I went up and introduced myself as the rabbi of the place, the only rabbi, the head rabbi," said Rabbi Edward Treister. "I told the guard I wanted to speak to the athletes and find out if everything was okay."

"They assured me everything was fine and sent me on my way. Apparently you need a special pass which I didn't have. Even the cleaning staff needs that special pass."

Rabbi Treister, appointed to his position by the Canadian Jewish Congress, is one of a handful of ecumenical agents who are here to counsel any interested athletes.

There are agents here of the Moslem, Greek Orthodox, Lutheran, Anglican and Roman Catholic faiths.

"It's an outreach situation," Rabbi Treister said. "You make yourself known as a person the athletes can approach with their problems. The problems usually involve a certain kind of anxiety."

ASU Gridders Drown

TOPOCK, Ariz. (AP) — The body of Ainslie Washington, 19, an Arizona State University defensive back, was found floating on the Colorado River Wednesday, Mohave County Sheriff's deputies said.

Washington, of Santa Monica, Calif., disappeared Friday while on a canoe trip with 15 other athletes. The group was participating in a class project in recreation, headed by Dr. George Greey, professor of physical education at ASU.

Halfway through the trip, Washington jumped into the river to retrieve a lost hat.

"He tossed the hat back into the canoe, held onto the side for a moment, and then said, 'I'm going to cool off,'" Greey related.

Scouts Trying To Save Club

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A last-ditch attempt to save the National Hockey League franchise for Kansas City was reported Wednesday ready for presentation to the NHL board of governors.

NBA Rids Blocks

NEW YORK (AP) — Two more obstacles to the pro basketball merger of the National Basketball Association and four former American Basketball Association teams were eliminated when tentative settlements were reached Wednesday on problems involving the Oscar Robertson antitrust suit and the St. Louis-Utah franchise.

The NBA and its Players Association apparently removed one roadblock when they tentatively settled their differences in the Robertson suit during a meeting with U.S. Dist. Judge Robert Carter, who is in charge of overseeing the suit and the merger between the two leagues.

However, approval of the agreement is still required by the NBA Board of Governors, composed of the 18 NBA team owners. NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien said the Board would be notified of the agreement by telex Thursday. He expected results of the vote by Monday with a three-fourths majority, or 14 yes votes, needed for approval.

No details of the agreement were released, but O'Brien said "I have changed from pessimistic to reasonably optimistic" of approval. He added that the NBA's Advisory Board favored the agreement.

Law Changing Tech Schools' Financing, Regulations Is Upheld

By The Associated Press
A divided Nebraska Supreme Court ruled Wednesday that a 1975 law, which made changes in the financing and state regulation of Technical Community Colleges, is constitutional.

The high court upheld the law in a 5-2 decision that brought a stinging dissent from Judge Lawrence M. Clinton. Chief Justice Paul White joined the dissent.

The law was passed in 1975 in response to a ruling by the court in 1974, which held an existing technical community college act to be unconstitutional.

The court ruled the old law unconstitutional on grounds that it violated an amendment to the state constitution because it had the effect of mandating a state property tax that was used for a state purpose.

The Sheridan County District Court upheld the law's constitutionality and county officials appealed to the high court. It was Sheridan County that successfully challenged the 1974 act.

The constitution does not allow state use of property tax, and in Wednesday's decision, the majority said the 1975 Technical Community College Act does not violate that prohibition.

Writing for the majority, Judge John E. Newton reviewed provisions of the 1975 act and said, "The technical community colleges are now in largely the same position as our school districts. They operate on a strictly local basis, subject only to guidelines laid down by the legislature."

The court noted its 1974 decision held that "the crucial issue of the use of property tax levies to support the tech school system turns on a determination of whether the controlling and predominant purposes are state purposes or local purposes."

"The technical community colleges are no longer dominated by a state board or subject to a compulsory property tax levy of one mill," the court said.

Each tech school area is empowered to determine and levy property taxes not exceeding 2.5 mills, unless more is voted by the electors, but that is no longer compulsory. "The area boards exercise the same powers and functions as other political subdivisions and the operation of each respective board is controlled by its area board," the majority opinion said.

The court noted that a commission established by the legislature "has no real power, but is designed to give such assistance and advice as may be helpful in the operation of the colleges, to discourage unnecessary duplication and training fields, and promote uniformity." The court said that the commission simply makes it unnecessary for the legislature to lay down a multiplicity of rules for the schools.

The decision said that state aid to schools "necessarily involves the comingling of state and local purposes."

"The interest of the state in education is evidenced by the constitutional provision for free common schools in creation of colleges and universities as well as elementary and high schools. Yet in every instance where schools are locally controlled and supported, no objection has been found to a provision for state aid. No constitutional objection thereto has been called to out attention and we know of none."

"The mere granting of state aid does not render a school operation a state function," the court held.

In his dissent, Judge Clinton claimed, "The majority opinion today tells the legislature that it can avoid the prohibitions of the constitutional amendment insofar as future state purpose programs are concerned."

"Thus the Duis amendment is reduced to mere compliance with a formula or procedure, when in fact the amendment has to do with substance and effect..."

"The majority opinion pays lip service to a valid principle of constitutional construction... but does not even discuss the intent and purpose that the framers and the people had in mind," Clinton said.

The new law doesn't mandate a property tax levy in order to qualify for a state appropriation as the old law did, Clinton said, "but as a practical matter this makes no difference. The original state purpose still remains."

"A statewide levy is, as a practical matter, mandated just as much as it was under the previous act and in greater amount," he argued.

The tech schools couldn't function on their current scale with the money the legislature is willing to appropriate, Clinton said, and therefore "the levy of the property tax is, in effect, mandated."

"The purpose of the Duis amendment is met only if this system... is supported wholly by a state appropriation from state income and sales tax," Clinton said, and that is how the legislature should have responded to the 1974 court decision.

"The legislature and this court now combine to effectively destroy the intended substantive effect of the Duis amendment," Clinton said.

Judge Leslie Boslaugh concurred in holding the 1975 law constitutional. But he said he did not agree that the Duis amendment is "a complete restriction upon legislative discretion to convert traditional state functions into local functions."

Judge Harry Spencer joined in the constitutional concurrence and in the limited dissent.

Judicial Systems Financing Upheld

By The Associated Press
The Nebraska Supreme Court held Wednesday that the state system of financing county and district courts, as well as other judicial functions, is constitutional.

Banner County had challenged the system by arguing that the constitution prohibits use of county or local property taxes for a state purpose, and that the system involved is a state purpose.

The court was unanimous in affirming the Banner County District Court which rejected the county's position.

Banner County had cited an amendment to the constitution prohibiting use of property taxes for state purposes.

"The levy of a property tax by a local governmental unit should not be treated as a state levy for state purposes merely because the legislature has authorized or required the local governmental unit to make the levy," the court said.

"A statute authorizing or requiring a county to levy a property tax for purposes substantially local does not contravene the prohibitions," in the constitution, "although the statute comes from state and local purposes," the court said.

"Each of the governmental activities involved here was supported, either in whole or in part, by local county property tax levies at the time the constitutional amendment became effective, at the time it was adopted and at all times before that," the court said. "There is no reason to believe the people intended to disturb that historical pattern" when adopting the amendment that Banner County referred to.

The case began when the state sued Banner County to recover funds for the Nebraska Retirement Fund for Judges, which the county refused to pay. The county questioned whether the law required the matching payment from the county, and then raised the constitutional question and sought reimbursement from the state for money it spent on judicial functions.

"Statutory provisions requiring the counties to pay the costs and expenses of maintaining a county court; a district court; prosecuting criminal law violations; and conducting state and national elections," are not unconstitutional, the court said.

The court also said counties were clearly required to contribute to the judges' retirement fund.

Banner County pointed to a 1974 decision by the high court that ruled the then-technical community college act unconstitutional.

The court said the cases were not similar because the 1974 law mandated a statewide property tax, in effect, by denying state aid for the tech schools if the tax wasn't levied.

In other decisions the high court:

—affirmed the Dodge County District Court's decision in a farm partnership case involving H. Dale and John Von Seggern —affirmed the Dakota County District Court in a trust case involving Royce Kolbe and K. K. Chevrolet, Inc.

—affirmed the 15-50 year sentence imposed on James Gilliam by the Douglas County District Court for robbery.

—dismissed the appeal of Gerald Belts from Hall County District Court's sentence for burglary.

—affirmed the Hall County District Court in a real estate case involving Lyle David and Erna Tucker.

—affirmed the Scotts Bluff County District Court's dismissal of a malpractice suit involving Natalie Taylor and R. V. Karrer, citing the statute of limitations.

—affirmed the Saunders County District Court in a case involving the Foxley Cattle Co. and the Bank of Mead, reversing and remanding the Lancaster County District Court's decision in a case involving First National Bank and Trust Co. of Lincoln and the Ohio Casualty Insurance Co.

Law Changing Tech Schools' Financing, Regulations Is Upheld

By The Associated Press
A divided Nebraska Supreme Court ruled Wednesday that a 1975 law, which made changes in the financing and state regulation of Technical Community Colleges, is constitutional.

The high court upheld the law in a 5-2 decision that brought a stinging dissent from Judge Lawrence M. Clinton. Chief Justice Paul White joined the dissent.

The law was passed in 1975 in response to a ruling by the court in 1974, which held an existing technical community college act to be unconstitutional.

The court ruled the old law unconstitutional on grounds that it violated an amendment to the state constitution because it had the effect of mandating a state property tax that was used for a state purpose.

The Sheridan County District Court upheld the law's constitutionality and county officials appealed to the high court. It was Sheridan County that successfully challenged the 1974 act.

The constitution does not allow state use of property tax, and in Wednesday's decision, the majority said the 1975 Technical Community College Act does not violate that prohibition.

Writing for the majority, Judge John E. Newton reviewed provisions of the 1975 act and said, "The technical community colleges are now in largely the same position as our school districts. They operate on a strictly local basis, subject only to guidelines laid down by the legislature."

The court noted its 1974 decision held that "the crucial issue of the use of property tax levies to support the tech school system turns on a determination of whether the controlling and predominant purposes are state purposes or local purposes."

"The technical community colleges are no longer dominated by a state board or subject to a compulsory property tax levy of one mill," the court said.

Each tech school area is empowered to determine and levy property taxes not exceeding 2.5 mills, unless more is voted by the electors, but that is no longer compulsory.

"The area boards exercise the same powers and functions as other political subdivisions and the operation of each respective board is controlled by its area board," the majority opinion said.

The court noted that a commission established by the legislature "has no real power, but is designed to give such assistance and advice as may be helpful in the operation of the colleges, to discourage unnecessary duplication and training fields, and promote uniformity." The court said that the commission simply makes it unnecessary for the legislature to lay down a multiplicity of rules for the schools.

The decision said that state aid to schools "necessarily involves the comingling of state and local purposes."

"The interest of the state in education is evidenced by the constitutional provision for free common schools in creation of colleges and universities as well as elementary and high schools. No constitutional objection thereto has been called to out attention and we know of none."

"The mere granting of state aid does not render a school operation a state function," the court held.

Penney's Block Design Unveiled

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

A tentative design for "Centrum II" was unveiled Wednesday to the City-County Planning Commission, which later approved the concept of the redevelopment.

The commission's action amounts to a green light for further planning on the project, which includes demolition of many of the existing buildings on the block bounded by 13th, 14th, P and O Sts.

Replacing those buildings would be a parking garage and an expanded Penney's store. The northwest corner of the block, occupied by the Stuart Building, would not be affected.

The tentative design unveiled to the commission showed a two-story structure, relatively low in comparison to other downtown buildings.

The Penney's store would occupy most of the block along O St., providing much more retail space than the store has at its present facility at 13th and P.

The parking garage would have exit and entrance ramps to P St. at the northeast corner of the block.

A highlight of the parking garage is a proposed second-floor extension across P St., in effect roofing about half a block.

The parking garage would have three levels, one below ground and extending beneath the proposed new store.

But the design, stressed commission member Lou Shackelford, is in a very preliminary stage.

He said the plan is being studied now in the national headquarters of the Penney's chain "to see if it would interest them in staying downtown."

Another alternative under consideration is locating in a shopping center the size of Gateway. The idea for Centrum II is the work of Kenny King, a vice president of Commercial Federal Savings and Loan, which owns more than half the land fronting O St. in the block.

The name "Centrum II" is derived from the redevelopment project for the block bounded by 11th, 12th, N and O Sts.

It too includes a parking garage and retail space.

On another matter, proposed new restrictions on the height of new buildings near the State Capitol drew little comment at a public hearing.

One realtor told the commission he would object to limitations which would decrease the value of property owned by his company.

Homeowners Resist Metcalf Zoning Plan

A zoning change to permit the opening of a funeral home at 73rd and Holdrege was opposed Wednesday by neighborhood residents before the City-County Planning Commission.

Metcalf Funeral Home is seeking to open another facility at a six-acre site at the northeast corner of the intersection.

At one time there was a church on the property. Later the Knights of Columbus operated a center in the building.

The commission is slated to act on the request next week. Planning Director Doug Brogden opposes the request change from A-2 single family to G local business.

In other action, the commission held public hearings or acted on the following items:

— Request for change of zone by Dorothy Barrow from A-2 single family to G local business at 70th and Adams — Request for change of zone by Cornhusker Bank from B two-family to I commercial, on north side of Dudley about 100 feet east of 27th St

— Proposed amendments to zoning ordinances relating to requested changes of zone in the county

— Request for special permit by Joe Augustine to remodel existing building for use as health club near 20th and Sumner — Request for special permit by Dr. Wayne D. Harm to expand building and add parking near 33rd and A Sts — Approved preliminary plat of Halcrest Add., located south of Adams and east of 70th Sts

— Approved final plat of Stevens Ridge Estates located east of 70th and one-fourth mile south of Old Cheney Rd

Inspection Takeover Supported By Mayor

Mayor Helen Boosalis said Wednesday she supports a state takeover of milk inspection duties now performed by the City-County Health Department.

She noted that State Agriculture Director Glenn Kreuscher has assured her the state will do as good a job as local officials.

On another point in the matter, Mrs. Boosalis said the city attorney's office has concluded that the health department's contract with the state to conduct the inspections is valid.

The State Agricultural Department has raised the question because the city repealed its ordinances on milk inspection in 1969.

But Assistant City Attorney Bill Blake said he believes the contract is authorized under the Inter-governmental Cooperation Act.

City-County Workers May Pay For Parking

The possibility of charging city and county employees for parking in government lots is under study, Mayor Helen Boosalis said Wednesday.

The proposal is part of a broadbased study of governmental parking policies in the city including those which affect state and federal officials, she said.

Officials met this week to discuss present policies and rates that will be charged at the State Office Building parking garage when it opens next month.

Mrs. Boosalis said that charging city and county employees for parking might induce them to park on residential streets.

But she said that problem might be countered by limiting the amount of time an auto could be parked on those streets.

In addition, she said, parking fees should provide an incentive for employees to form carpools.

Mayor Conditionally OKs Plan For SeTech Campus

"Conditional approval" to plans for a Southeast Technical College campus on the east edge of the city was given Wednesday by Mayor Helen Boosalis.

There had been fears that the campus would violate a city policy of limiting growth to the east into the Stevens Creek watershed.

Mayor Boosalis has been studying plans for the campus supplied her by college officials. She said Wednesday that based on those plans it appears the campus will not violate the ban against expansion into the watershed.

She said all the buildings planned for the campus will be located on its western edge, outside the watershed.

The rest of the campus will be used for agricultural plots for students, parking and similar uses.

Further discussion of the plan by city officials will be held at a meeting July 29 with college officials.

Protest Group Denied Park Use

Kansas City (AP) — A group of protesters gathering here for the Republican National Convention in August have been denied use of Penn Valley Park near the convention arena as a campsite.

Announcement of the denial was made by the city parks and recreation commissioners in response to a request by the Kansas City Convention Coalition, representing the protesters. "Protesters have a right to dissent, but not at the expense of the public," said Commissioner Carl Migliano.

The coalition also had asked for water and sanitation provisions. The commissioners said they may use the park for recreation only.

Poll: Majority Of Judges, Lawyers Approve Of County Courts

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Although the way Nebraska county courts are organized needs some changes, a majority of lawyers and judges responding to a survey believe the system "is meeting with success."

Lt. Gov. Gerald T. Whelan commissioned the poll, for use by court, state and law officials in pursuing any perceived adjustments by the Legislature.

However, only 22% of the respondents favored returning to the former appeal system, and 14% supported only a modified return. Forty-nine percent expressed approval of the present system, and the remainder made no response, indicated it "doesn't matter" or they had no opinion

Thus, deducing that proponents of outright change would have indicated that, those endorsing no change can be lumped with the disinterested group, to indicate roughly 66% approval.

Whelan, aided by state planning officials, sent out 984 questionnaires and got 460 "usable" responses. The totals exclude Lancaster and Douglas Counties, where court revisions had the least impact.

The Legislature completely reorganized the county court system effective Jan. 4, 1973. Previously, there were 93 independent county courts with judges who weren't always lawyers, police magistrates and about 100 justices of the peace. The latter two were abolished and their functions merged into county court operations, and all judges (except associates) were required to be lawyers.

The result was 21 county court districts each encompassing from one to nine counties, served by one to three judges from the new total of 43.

Whelan said his survey of the situation was an objective attempt, but he acknowledged interpretation of the responses based on some preconceived notions cannot be totally unbiased.

In a series of open-ended questions, with no suggested replies, the respondents listed these most often as the strengths of the county court system: more experienced and better qualified judges; more efficient, uniform, fair system; consolidation and elimination of justice of the peace and city police courts; better administration, personnel and facilities; expanded or better jurisdiction.

Among perceived weaknesses mentioned most often: judges not readily available; judges not qualified; too many nonlawyer associate judges; overloaded and too slow system. Excessive expense, inefficiency and inadequate funding were combined with questionable validity as another weakness.

Whelan conceded the findings are "ambiguous and somewhat difficult to interpret." For example, regarding judges' qualifications, 25% viewed them as strengthened resulting from the county court revamp, while 11% cited weaknesses.

"Reforms mentioned most often included changing the method of selecting judges, increasing (their) availability, and abolishing or severely limiting the responsibilities of the non-lawyer associate judge," he said.

"Satisfaction with the (current) system is also evident in the respondents' perception of the workload" of county judges, Whelan said, showing 45% rated it "about right."

"Similar levels of satisfaction were found with the workload of associate judges and the (state) court administrator," he said.

Court Administrator James E. Dunleavy said, "Basically, I didn't find and particular surprises in the information collected." Most objections about overload came from single-judge districts and those about underwork from two- and three-judge districts.

Penney's Block Design Unveiled

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

A tentative design for "Centrum II" was unveiled Wednesday to the City-County Planning Commission, which later approved the concept of the redevelopment.

The commission's action amounts to a green light for further planning on the project, which includes demolition of many of the existing buildings on the block bounded by 13th, 14th, P and O Sts.

Replacing those buildings would be a parking garage and an expanded Penney's store. The northwest corner of the block, occupied by the Stuart Building, would not be affected.

The tentative design unveiled to the commission showed a two-story structure, relatively low in comparison to other downtown buildings.

The Penney's store would occupy most of the block along O St., providing much more retail space than the store has at its present facility at 13th and P.

The parking garage would have exit and entrance ramps to P St. at the northeast corner of the block.

A highlight of the parking garage is a proposed second-floor extension across P St., in effect roofing about half a block.

The parking garage would have three levels, one below ground and extending beneath the proposed new store.

But the design, stressed commission member Lou Shackelford, is in a very preliminary stage.

He said the plan is being studied now in the national headquarters of the Penney's chain "to see if it would interest them in staying downtown."

Another alternative under consideration is locating in a shopping center the size of Gateway. The idea for Centrum II is the work of Kenny King, a vice president of Commercial Federal Savings and Loan, which owns more than half the land fronting O St. in the block.

The name "Centrum II" is derived from the redevelopment project for the block bounded by 11th, 12th, N and O Sts.

It too includes a parking garage and retail space.

On another matter, proposed new restrictions on the height of new buildings near the State Capitol drew little comment at a public hearing.

One realtor told the commission he would object to limitations which would decrease the value of property owned by his company.

Desegregation Moves Ordered

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge ordered the Department of Health, Education and Welfare on Wednesday to move against 46 public school districts outside the South for alleged failures to desegregate their schools.

But Martin H. Gerry, director of HEW's Office of Civil Rights, protested later that the government had already taken the proper actions against the districts "in virtually all instances" or the districts were voluntarily desegregating their schools.

He indicated the department would appeal the order.

New York City schools and those in Los Angeles, Chicago, Omaha and Hartford, Conn., were among those cited in the order by U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica.

The actions he ordered taken within the next 60 to 120 days, if upheld, could lead to the end of federal aid for those school districts under Title 6 of the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

"I regret that the judge felt it appropriate to take this action, particularly in light of his open acknowledgement that the record in the case before him was stale. The record before the judge was indeed stale," Gerry said.

But Sirica said that HEW officials had "failed in their duties."

"The substantial delays of from 1 1/2 to eight years without bringing these investigations to conclusions, during which time the school districts involved have continued to receive federal financial assistance, violate the agency's own regulations and the express intent of Congress in Title 6," the judge ruled.

The plaintiffs in the case had accused HEW of failing to enforce the desegregation requirements of the law in northern and western states the way the government has done in the South.

Sirica broke the districts into three categories in issuing his order and setting timetables for each.

Fourteen districts were in the category of "substantial delays" the judge cited in his ruling. He ordered HEW to conclude their probes within 60 days, issue findings and begin enforcement proceedings within 120 days if violations were found.

An additional 26 districts had already been found to violate Title 6, Sirica said, and he ordered compliance hearings for them within 60 days.

In the final six cases, districts had been found in violation of Title 6 but HEW had not moved against them, the judge said, ordering the department to do so.

Gerry said that "investigations have been completed in each of the 46 districts listed." Only New York City's public schools remain under active investigation, he said.

Of the other 45 cases, Gerry said, 21 "voluntary compliance plans have been negotiated and accepted. Four districts are currently involved in administrative enforcement proceedings. One is before a federal court. In 10 cases, the department has made a final determination of non-compliance and is preparing to take formal enforcement action."

Fowler, Challenger Trade Accusations

By BOB REEVES
Star Staff Writer

Sen. Steve Fowler and his challenger, Donald Stenberg, accused each other Wednesday night of being tied to special interests, while each portrayed himself as championing the views of voters in the 27th Legislative District.

Stenberg, who has challenged Fowler to a series of debates, said Fowler's acceptance of large campaign contributions from certain organizations makes him obligated to them.

Fowler said his biggest contributors have been the Political Action Committee for Education, the Lancaster County Democratic Party, the Nebraska AFL-CIO and the Trial Attorneys Association, none of which he said represents a narrow interest group.

Stenberg's major supporters represent real estate interests, the "highway lobby" and insurance companies, Fowler contended.

Fowler asked his supporters to stand. More than two-thirds of the 125 persons in the audience stood up.

Stenberg said he has limited his campaign contributions to $100 per donor. Fowler said his own campaign has received much larger gifts.

Both candidates said they believe in "local control" of government.

"The central government doesn't understand the needs of the average citizen," Stenberg said.

"Some of the major problems in the country are being discussed at the local level," Fowler remarked.

On specific issues, Fowler said he favors neighborhood preservation, opposes the "pork barrel" politics of the University of Nebraska-Omaha and believes public utilities are "unresponsive" in setting rates.

Stenberg said he supports legislation to control the misuse of unemployment insurance by persons who voluntarily leave their jobs, a measure Fowler opposes.

In response to a question from the audience, Stenberg said he favors a U.S. constitutional amendment requiring a balanced budget except in national emergencies.

Board Plods Through More Figures

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

"They spent $188 last year and they're asking for $500." "Let's give 'em $300." "How about $225?"

"Going, going, gone for $225." And with that the three Lancaster County commissioners chopped another $275 from a departmental budget request.

Line by line, through mileage, training fees, stationery and new typewriters, the commissioners slowly chipped another $300,000 away from the county departmental budget requests Wednesday.

The work was time-consuming — six hours of picking apart budgets during the day and three largely unproductive hours at night.

It was haphazard, at times frustrating.

And it was tiring. But after two days of budget-cutting, the commissioners were about $600,000 shorter, averaging about $66,000 an hour.

They have at least another $400,000 to go this week before the budgets will balance with the amount of money the county can raise in taxes this year.

As the commissioners skipped from one budget to another and back again, Robert Colin complained, "I don't know what we're doing; where we are."

And Board Chairman Bruce Hamilton agreed. "I just get so discouraged. This is so disorganized... I just want to get it done."

The sheriff's department lost more than $100,000 from its request of more than $1.2 million and almost had its helicopter grounded for the year.

Both Jan Gauger and Hamilton wanted to eliminate all $30,000-plus in repair items related to the helicopter until the sheriff and the Lincoln Police Department work out some kind of joint helicopter use arrangement.

The city helicopter is being used only 15 hours a month and the county's chopper less than 10 hours a month, said Mrs. Gauger, adding that "Lancaster County does not need two helicopters."

But Colin, himself a pilot, argued that the solution was simpler than hassling through a joint committee.

"Let the city get rid of their chopper," he said. "We can't sell ours. We have to give it back to the government," said Colin about the chopper which was a gift to the county.

"I'm not going to vote one cent for the helicopter. That's the only way we are going to force the two departments to use just one helicopter," Hamilton said.

But Mrs. Gauger finally relented and voted to add enough money to get the chopper's transmission overhauled, something that Colin said was absolutely necessary for safety reasons.

If the two law enforcement agencies don't come to some agreement this year, the county chopper will be grounded next summer because commissioners did not budget any money for repairs necessary to meet Federal Aviation Administration requirements.

Hamilton also chiseled away at the sheriff's drug-buying money, cutting a $10,000 request to $7,000. And that was a compromise. Hamilton wanted no money for drug buys.

"Drug money results in dead people. That's what happens," he said.

Commissioners whittled away $94,700 in bits and pieces from the Juvenile Court request of $562,246 and more than $88,000 from the county attorney's $630,350 request.

Most of the cuts in the county attorney's budget came out of requests for new equipment plus a hefty $40,000 reduction in a federal grant for the office administrator.

Cuts from the equipment list included 16 replacement desks for secretaries and lawyers, 14 reception area chairs, carpeting and directional signs for the office.

The board seemed unwilling to grant the large raises to deputy county attorneys that County Atty. Ron Lahners is seeking in his budget. But the actual decision on the raises, which average about 10%, will be made later this week.

The commissioners also took a third and fourth look at other budgets and trimmed another $4,445 from the treasurer's $410,451 request primarily by removing all out-of-state trips. Commissioners had early cut more than $12,000 from this budget by denying new-employee requests.

At Colin's insistence commissioners re-examined the Juvenile Attention Center budget of $307,902, down almost $60,000 from the original request. This time they trimmed another $10,000 by eliminating one new employee, leaving the staff number the same as last year.

During the evening session, the commissioners managed to trim only $150 from meals and lodging expenses for the human services department's air fare. However, the board tentatively added a $475 filing cabinet to the department's budget.

While working on the budget for the register of deeds, the commissioners became confused over a request for $34,000 to replace photocopy machines and, after one phone call to clear up the muddle, trimmed the request to $16,800 and added it to the budget.

By the end of the evening, the commissioners, looking budget-weary, calculated an estimate of how much progress they had made. The result: they were still about 1.346 mills over the constitutional 14.28-mill-levy ceiling.

Desegregation Moves Ordered

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge ordered the Department of Health, Education and Welfare on Wednesday to move against 46 public school districts outside the South for alleged failures to desegregate their schools.

But Martin H. Gerry, director of HEW's Office of Civil Rights, protested later that the government had already taken the proper actions against the districts "in virtually all instances" or the districts were voluntarily desegregating their schools.

He indicated the department would appeal the order.

New York City schools and those in Los Angeles, Chicago, Omaha and Hartford, Conn., were among those cited in the order by U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica.

The actions he ordered taken within the next 60 to 120 days, if upheld, could lead to the end of federal aid for those school districts under Title 6 of the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

"I regret that the judge felt it appropriate to take this action, particularly in light of his open acknowledgement that the record in the case before him was stale. The record before the judge was indeed stale," Gerry said.

But Sirica said that HEW officials had "failed in their duties."

"The substantial delays of from 1½ to eight years without bringing these investigations to conclusions, during which time the school districts involved have continued to receive federal financial assistance, violate the agency's own regulations and the express intent of Congress in Title 6," the judge ruled.

The plaintiffs in the case had accused HEW of failing to enforce the desegregation requirements of the law in northern and western states the way the government has done in the South.

Sirica broke the districts into three categories in issuing his order and setting timetables for each.

Fourteen districts were in the category of "substantial delays" the judge cited in his ruling. He ordered HEW to conclude their probes within 60 days, issue findings and begin enforcement proceedings within 120 days if violations were found.

An additional 26 districts had already been found to violate Title 6, Sirica said, and he ordered compliance hearings for them within 60 days.

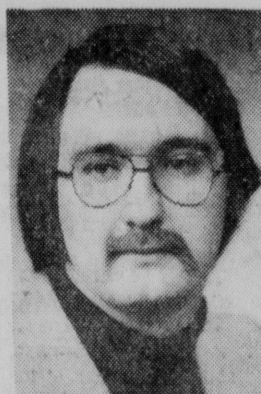

In the final six cases, districts had been found in violation of Title 6 but HEW had not moved against them, the judge said, ordering the department to do so.

Gerry said that "investigations have been completed in each of the 46 districts listed." Only New York City's public schools remain under active investigation, he said.

Of the other 45 cases, Gerry said, 21 "voluntary compliance plans have been negotiated and accepted. Four districts are currently involved in administrative enforcement proceedings. One is before a federal court. In 10 cases, the department has made a final determination of non-compliance and is preparing to take formal enforcement action."

Fowler, Challenger Trade Accusations

By BOB REEVES
Star Staff Writer

Sen. Steve Fowler and his challenger, Donald Stenberg, accused each other Wednesday night of being tied to special interests, while each portrayed himself as championing the views of voters in the 27th Legislative District.

Stenberg, who has challenged Fowler to a series of debates, said Fowler's acceptance of large campaign contributions from certain organizations makes him obligated to them.

Fowler said his biggest contributors have been the Political Action Committee for Education, the Lancaster County Democratic Party, the Nebraska AFL-CIO and the Trial Attorneys Association, none of which he said represents a narrow interest group.

Stenberg's major supporters represent real estate interests, the "highway lobby" and insurance companies, Fowler contended.

Fowler asked his supporters to stand. More than two-thirds of the 125 persons in the audience stood up.

Stenberg said he has limited his campaign contributions to $100 per donor. Fowler said his own campaign has received much larger gifts.

Both candidates said they believe in "local control" of government.

"The central government doesn't understand the needs of the average citizen," Stenberg said.

"Some of the major problems in the country are being discussed at the local level," Fowler remarked.

On specific issues, Fowler said he favors neighborhood preservation, opposes the "pork barrel" politics of the University of Nebraska-Omaha and believes public utilities are "unresponsive" in setting rates.

Stenberg said he supports legislation to control the misuse of unemployment insurance by persons who voluntarily leave their jobs, a measure Fowler opposes.

In response to a question from the audience, Stenberg said he favors a U.S. constitutional amendment requiring a balanced budget except in national emergencies.

Board Plods Through More Figures

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

"They spent $188 last year and they're asking for $500."

"Let's give 'em $300."

"How about $225?"

"Going, going, gone for $225."

And with that the three Lancaster County commissioners chopped another $275 from a departmental budget request.

Line by line, through mileage, training fees, stationery and new typewriters, the commissioners slowly chipped another $300,000 away from the county departmental budget requests Wednesday.

The work was time-consuming — six hours of picking apart budgets during the day and three largely unproductive hours at night.

It was haphazard, at times frustrating.

And it was tiring.

But after two days of budget-cutting, the commissioners were about $600,000 shorter, averaging about $66,000 an hour. They have at least another $400,000 to go this week before the budgets will balance with the amount of money the county can raise in taxes this year.

As the commissioners skipped from one budget to another and back again, Robert Colin complained, "I don't know what we're doing; where we are."

Lincoln Police were looking Wednesday for 14-year-old Scott Thurman who disappeared from his Lincoln home July 13.

Thurman may be camping near Lincoln with Thomas E. Wright, who police believe may have taken the boy with him.

A warrant has been issued for Wright, 24, for "unlawfully detaining" Thurman.

The teen-ager's mother told police that Thurman was last seen July 13 when he was carrying a sleeping bag and three canoe trophies. He was reported missing a week ago.

He is 5 feet tall, weighs 100 pounds, has ear-length brown hair and blue eyes. He was last seen wearing blue jeans, a red T-shirt and tennis shoes.

Wright was last heard from July 14, police said, the day after Thurman disappeared. Wright borrowed his brother's car,

Top Recording 5 Inches As Clouds Burst Open

Cloudbursts drenched parts of eastern and central Nebraska Wednesday, topped by 5.10 inches just south of Elm Creek in Buffalo County and an unofficial 4.00 inches south of Hastings.

Although no serious flooding was reported, water was running across U.S. 281 south of Hastings in several places for a time Thursday afternoon, the State Patrol reported.

During a 60-minute period in the afternoon, Papillion received 1.65 inches of rain and Ralston reported 1.50 inches.

Agricultural experts said the moisture should be a boost for Nebraska's row crops, especially dryland crops which were beginning to show stress from the heat and lack of rain.

Lincoln's rainfall, measured at .89 of an inch by 9 p.m., was light compared to other parts of Lancaster County, including 4.40 inches at Sprague, 3.25 at Roca, 3.00 at Bennet, and 2.25 at both Hickman and Kramer.

Police ask that anyone having any information about the boy or Wright to call them or the Lancaster County sheriff's office.

During a 60-minute period in the afternoon, Papillion received 1.65 inches of rain and Ralston reported 1.50 inches.

Agricultural experts said the moisture should be a boost for Nebraska's row crops, especially dryland crops which were beginning to show stress from the heat and lack of rain.

Lincoln's rainfall, measured at .89 of an inch by 9 p.m., was light compared to other parts of Lancaster County, including 4.40 inches at Sprague, 3.25 at Roca, 3.00 at Bennett, and 2.25 at both Hickman and Kramer.

Muggy weather accompanied the thunderstorms with humidity reaching into the 90s over eastern Nebraska during the day.

The National Weather Service said the thundershowers were due to a low pressure area centered in southwest Iowa along with a stationary front across the southeast corner of Nebraska.

Former TV Chief Has No Regrets

Los Angeles (AP) — Last May, Robert D. Wood resigned as head of CBS-TV after more than seven successful years. He also quit New York to return to his favorite locale for living — sunny Southern California.

It was a surprising move, leaving the power, big salary and "pin-striped perquisites of CBS in New York City. But Wood, born in Idaho, raised in Beverly Hills, says he has no regrets about his decision.

"To be back here, with my friends, my family, back where I was raised — geez, there's no way I can describe my exhilaration," said Wood, his voice as cheery as the day he was interviewed.

The man who gave the nod to a bold new show called "All in the Family" in 1971 and began a revolution in situation comedy isn't a member of the shuffleboard set yet. He's only 51, still active in TV.

He now heads Nephri Productions, Nephri being the name of the small Idaho town where he spend his boyhood summers. The company will develop TV shows exclusively for CBS — which Wood joined in 1949 — for at least four years. He already has four projects on the drawing boards.

They are a two-hour drama about a father and son; a pilot for a series about South Pacific families in late 1941, before the war; a Saturday morning variety show for kids; and another possible series starring award-winning playwright-actor Jason Miller.

Former president Wood, in short, now is producer Wood. So he was asked how he now regards something some top producers here are fighting in court — the sanitized "family viewing" hour the networks adopted last season in response to public beefs about TV sex and violence.

He was diplomatic about it, which is natural since his network pushed it and he had to defend it while at the helm of CBS-TV.

U.S. Visa Extended For Soviet Actress Fyodorova

Stamford, Conn. (UPI) — The Soviet Embassy in Washington has granted Soviet actress Zoya Fyodorova a 30-day visa extension for her stay in the United States.

Her son-in-law, airline pilot Fred Pouy, said she has no special plans for the extended visit into late August.

The Soviet actress came to the United States late in April on a three-month visit to be with her daughter, Victoria Fyodorova Pouy, who gave birth to a son in early May.

Mrs. Pouy is the daughter of the Russian actress and retired U.S. Adm. Jackson R. Tate, who met Zoya Fyodorova while stationed in the Soviet Union during World War II.

But he said he won't try to come up with shows with the idea of making some only for "family" time and others for adults-only hours.

"I'm just going for projects I think have real quality behind them," he said. "It's up to the networks to determine what is going to get its over-all schedule its maximum strength."

"And if I come in with a program they feel is super for their needs at 9:30 p.m. Tuesday or 8 p.m. Friday or whenever, they have to be the judge of that. I'm just letting the chips fall where they may."

U.S. Visa Extended For Soviet Actress Fyodorova

Stamford, Conn. (UPI) — The Soviet Embassy in Washington has granted Soviet actress Zoya Fyodorova a 30-day visa extension for her stay in the United States.

Her son-in-law, airline pilot Fred Pouy, said she has no special plans for the extended visit into late August.

The Soviet actress came to the United States late in April on a three-month visit to be with her daughter, Victoria Fyodorova Pouy, who gave birth to a son in early May.

Mrs. Pouy is the daughter of the Russian actress and retired U.S. Adm. Jackson R. Tate, who met Zoya Fyodorova while stationed in the Soviet Union during World War II.

PROMOTER . . .
Smith is genuinely proud of Nebraska, has become one of its top boosters.

'Good Life' Line Smith Brainchild

By LINDA OUG
Star Staff Writer

To J. Gregg Smith, Nebraska is the good life.

"Nebraska . . . the good life" is J. Gregg Smith.

Owner of an advertising firm specializing in tourism, Smith is the father of the state's tourism campaign.

He also developed the campaigns for North Dakota and the Old West Region, made up of Nebraska, Wyoming, the Dakotas and Montana.

When he vacations, it's a working vacation. He enthusiastically takes in the sights, the states his firm promotes.

"To sell this country, you have to like it," Smith said.

He wears a ring of Black Hills gold. His offices are decorated with William Russell (noted old west painter) prints and other western art. Like the cowboys of old, this man whittles to relax.

Smith, a native of Wyoming, arrived in Lincoln via Chicago.

What he found was a "bountiful land . . . green everywhere, blue skies." But a land in which its citizens held "very little pride."

That surprised him. "I had always been taught to be proud of my state," Smith said. "I could spot 'Wyoming' in a page of type."

He equates the lack of pride in Nebraska with a lack — quality and quantity — of Nebraska history. "All we hear about (Nebraska) is the Great American Desert and the dustbowl."

"No one ever asked why everybody stayed," the former editor of Nebraskaland magazine said. "They stayed because they loved it."

So did he. At one time in his advertising career — on the heels of his Rediscover America account — Smith had to choose between Chicago, Denver and Lincoln. He chose Lincoln.

It was five years ago that Smith's ad agency was hired by the Nebraska Department of Economic Development to come up with a program to promote tourism in the state.

Interstate 80 carries millions of Americans through Nebraska every summer. The "strategy," Smith said, was to "trip them up, to get them to stay an hour or two or overnight."

The first task was to develop a "good image" for Nebraska . . . "as a tourist place." As

Tourism now is the state's third largest industry. The campaign's first year netted a 20% increase in tourist dollars pouring into the state. Last year, tourists spent an estimated $404 million here, according to state figures.

Nebraska has much to offer tourists, Smith said. Nebraska attractions "are holding people as long as the major ones in the area." Vacationers spend more time in Nebraska (2.1 days) than at Yellowstone (one day); one-half day at Pioneer Village or the Sturh Museum, compared to only two hours at Mount Rushmore.

Smith also is the father of those controversial signs along the interstate. The signs are unique in the United States, Smith said, because they warn travelers of approaching sights of interest miles before the turn-off, not right at it.

A dozen public service, nonprofit attractions are promoted along the interstate and on highways leading to Yellowstone and the Black Hills; those and 23 other tourist spots are mentioned on the state highway map.

An ad man to the core, Smith loves to discuss his work, his products — and the results.

Most campaigns he has dreamed up for Nebraska and his other accounts, including North Dakota, the Old West Trails and the Ohio and Allegheny Region, have paid off.

Prospective clients usually latch onto his ideas immediately.

Usually. Once, Smith said, he was caught totally by surprise . . . when the national energy conservation account went to another firm. He still questions the decision and the gist of the accepted promotions.

And the North Dakota tourism folks were less than intrigued when Smith took the stereotype "Marlboro cowboy," the mainstay of that state's tourism campaign, off his horse and pictured him "a la Burt Reynolds" — but in full dress — as a calendar centerpiece.

And then there was the Wild West World promo and development that failed to materialize for North Platte — and for Smith.

He's hoping the seeds his firm planted for the National Arbor Day Foundation's Greening of America/Tree City USA campaign will take root.

Opening lead — queen of spades.

There were a handful of members of the club who stoutly maintained that Sylvia was the worst player they had ever seen. Of course, most of them realized that this harsh judgment was colored by their own bitter experiences as her partner. Even so, it was quite fashionable to refer to Sylvia in this derogatory manner.

Despite this reputation, Sylvia had her sublime moments of glory. Consider this deal where she was West and led the queen of spades against three notrump. She was playing with a partner who had beseeched her on innumerable occasions, as had so many others, to conserve her high cards during the play.

It was largely for this reason, after declarer had won the spade lead with the king and led the king of clubs — followed by the jack — that Sylvia obediently played her ten on the jack! She was determined to conserve her highest card in clubs, the queen!

Declarer had planned to follow low from dummy had Sylvia played the queen, or had she shown out of clubs — because he could in that way guarantee at least four notrump.

But when Sylvia produced the ten, declarer could not conceive that Sylvia would have the Q-10-x and fail to cover the jack, and accordingly he went up with the ace in dummy, expecting to catch East's queen.

When East showed out on the ace of clubs, declarer, to his utter dismay, found himself going down two. So Sylvia, as a result of having once again misapplied a rule that had repeatedly been drilled into her, added still another scalp to her varied collection.

'Good Life' Line Smith Brainchild

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

To J. Gregg Smith, Nebraska is the good life.

"Nebraska . . . the good life" is J. Gregg Smith.

Owner of an advertising firm specializing in tourism, Smith is the father of the state's tourism campaign.

He also developed the campaigns for North Dakota and the Old West Region, made up of Nebraska, Wyoming, the Dakotas and Montana.

When he vacations, it's a working vacation. He enthusiastically takes in the sights, the states his firm promotes.

"To sell this country, you have to like it," Smith said.

He wears a ring of Black Hills gold. His offices are decorated with William Russell (noted old west painter) prints and other western art.

Like the cowboys of old, this man whittles to relax.

Smith, a native of Wyoming, arrived in Lincoln via Chicago.

What he found was a "bountiful land . . . green everywhere, blue skies." But a land in which its citizens held "very little pride."

That surprised him. "I had always been taught to be proud of my state," Smith said. "I could spot 'Wyoming' in a page of type."

He equates the lack of pride in Nebraska with a lack — quality and quantity — of Nebraska history. "All we hear about (Nebraska) is the Great American Desert and the dustbowl."

"No one ever asked why everybody stayed," the former editor of Nebraskaland magazine said. "They stayed because they loved it."

So did he. At one time in his advertising career—on the heels of his Rediscover America account — Smith had to choose between Chicago, Denver and Lincoln. He chose Lincoln.

It was five years ago that Smith's ad agency was hired by the Nebraska Department of Economic Development to come up with a program to promote tourism in the state.

Interstate 80 carries millions of Americans through Nebraska every summer. The "strategy," Smith said, was to "trip them up, to get them to stay an hour or two or overnight."

The first task was to develop a "good image" for Nebraska . . . "as a tourist place." As

Smith tells it, coming up with the slogan "Nebraska . . . the Good Life" was a snap. "When you compare this bountiful land with other places it is indeed the good life."

Tourism now is the state's third largest industry. The campaign's first year netted a 20% increase in tourist dollars pouring into the state. Last year, tourists spent an estimated $404 million here, according to state figures.

Children Resolve To Stay Together

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

Eight months ago Leslie Robbins Jr., 21, was a brother to Roger, 20, Alicia, 17, Beverly, 15, and Frank, 10.

Now he is "father" to the family of five — a position he fought for and won, with the support of his brothers and sisters, neighbors and friends.

Last December the children lost their mother to a sudden heart attack. A divorce several years earlier had separated their parents.

With grief still fresh on their faces, the children resolved to stay together.

Their father, who lives in town, filed for custody; his children, however, were dead set against his moving back in. They wanted to go it on their own.

So they went to court and the judge ruled in their favor after hearing testimony from each. Aunts and uncles, friends and neighbors turned out to voice their support.

An appeal was filed in district court. Once again, the five testified on their own behalf. After a month of waiting they were relieved to learn the lower court decision was upheld.

"There was no way we'd be separated," Leslie had told the family's lawyer.

Somehow he was confident all along that the judge would allow him to be legal guardian for the younger family members. "I couldn't see how they could rule against us without at least giving us a chance."

Grateful for getting that chance, the Robbins kids have pulled together to make things work. They soon found out they had skills they never realized were there because, as Leslie puts it, "they hadn't been tested yet."

He remembers the initial period, however — getting over the shock of their mother's death, complicated by guardianship worries and the newness of household and financial management.

"They say you can't live on love, but those four months we had to," says Alicia.

Leslie agrees. "It seems like now I could probably adjust to about anything that could happen."

The first Social Security checks did not arrive until April. Although the family's home at 5102 Pioneer Blvd. was paid off, there were still bills to be paid and food to be put on the table. Neighbors, friends, relatives and members of the Southeast Presbyterian Church saw to it that the family's basic needs were met.

Since those early months, financial problems have eased. Roger works full time for a construction company, Leslie has a summer job with a contractor, Alicia works at Zeman School through the Job Experience Training program and Beverly babysits.

Money management, fortunately, was easy for Leslie, a junior in accounting at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

He sees to it that each youngster's savings account grows monthly. And there's some extra this summer for the younger members to take a bus trip to Texas to visit former neighbors while Leslie takes his motorcycle cross-country to see cousins in California.

But there were other problems for Leslie in the leap from sibling to guardian.

"It's hard for them to do what I tell them all the time and it's kind of hard for me to tell them what to do all the time. Usually things get done without my telling them because they realize they've got to be done."

Alicia adds: "We didn't listen to him before, but we do now."

With the added responsibility comes a certain loss of freedom for Leslie. "It cuts a lot of things out," he confides. "I can't just take off." He first must make sure that someone will be at home with Frank.

But there are benefits too. "It seems like Frank and I do more things together now." Big and little brother have camped in Iowa and visited Kansas City for a baseball game.

"We were close before," Alicia says, "but this has made us a lot closer."

People are still doing little things for the family, like baking birthday cakes and patching pants. But those offering help "don't act like we can't do it on our own," says Alicia.

The hardest adjustment for her has been "not coming home as we used to do and finding Mom here."

But things are running fine, says Leslie. "We've got the same problems any other family has. It's no different."

Teen-Ager Remembers Mother In Poem

Fifteen-year-old Beverly Robbins put the family tragedy into verse. Here is the way she explains the events which have transpired since the death of her mother.

Another Night

It's one of those nights again
Just like last night — and those before it
I remember you
Your glowing face and warm smile
Oh I wish I could see you once again
It seems only yesterday you told me you loved me
Do you still?
I know you'll never be back
Yet I hear you, feel you, love you
Somehow you're still around Telling me to pick up after myself, wash my hair and be good
You still sit in the same chair and sleep in the same bed

Only you don't wake me in the mornings or kiss me goodnight
How I regret the times we didn't kiss
Or share I love you's
I hate when I think of the times we fought and I didn't listen to you
Your words were wise
They were repeated by many, and still spoken
It was so hard when you left Something inexplicable
Something strange
There are times I still don't believe it
But now you are happier
Now you are unattached
No more bills to pay
Or lost loves to cry over
I'm so sorry for the hell you've been through I sometimes wonder how you survived with your surroundings
The hard ones I didn't bother to share, understand

But it's too late to be sorry
I think you know now that I am
I just want to say thanks
Thanks for keeping such a burden on yourself
You gave my life to me and made it happy—
All the time you spent preparing me, loving me
You gave of yourself to me
And took nothing back, expected nothing
You fed me, clothed me, strengthened me
But I realize now I could never be as strong as you
I stood straight with you holding me
Now your son—God love him
You made of one tree five branches
To reach out, grow
Soon to bend back together as one again
When we are with you
For we shall meet again
And find you amongst the best
Until then we shall still love, and wait
You will wait for us won't you??

Dividing Degree Was Too Much

Denver (UPI) — The Colorado Court of Appeals says a trial judge went too far in ordering a master's degree be divided by a couple getting a divorce.

The court overruled Boulder District Judge Horace B. Holmes, who issued the ruling in a divorce action between Dennis and Anne Graham.

Mrs. Graham, a stewardess, helped finance her husband's way through school so he could get the master's degree. He also worked during most of the marriage and attended school.

An expert testified the present value of the husband's education and advanced degree was $82,836, and the trial court judge awarded the wife the sum of $33,134 to be paid at the rate of $100 per month.

The appeals court, however, said it could "find no authority to consider education as a property item which is itself capable of division."

Whenever I use my automatic washing machine I think of the difficulty pioneer women had washing clothes for their families and why some "took in washing." Dr. Everett Dick tells in "Sod-House Frontier" how one pioneer woman washed for a neighbor for a loaf of bread when rations were short. Another time she received turkeys and chickens in exchange for washing. Basic needs had to be met in any way possible in those days.

Dr. Dick's description of the method of pioneer washing parallels my childhood memories on a farm. Our big black iron washpot stood firmly on three legs in the back yard. In order to get a good fire under the pot the legs rested on bricks. That old washpot was used for five specific functions by our family: (1) boiling clothes, (2) making soft soap, (3) dyeing cloth, (4) rendering lard and (5) boiling hams.

On washdays (Mondays) the pot was filled with water drawn by bucket and rope from the cistern and a fire started under it before daylight. Clothes were first scrubbed in a galvanized washtub on a brass washboard, boiled in the filled washpot to which soft soap had been added, for 30 minutes, then rinsed in washtubs through two waters and a blueing water. (We pronounced rinsed, "wrenched," and I thought it was because the clothes were twisted by hand to get the water out.)

The sun was our automatic dryer, but of course the clothes had to be pegged onto a wire clothesline in order to get its rays.

During the winter the washpot was taken inside and mounted on bricks in the kitchen fireplace. On Mondays the kitchen was turned into a wash house, but the clothes were hung on the outside clothesline to "freeze dry."

Making soap required a winter's supply of wood ashes stored in the ash-hopper with a water-tight cover, plus salvaged meat scraps and bones. In the spring, water poured over the ashes dripped through in the form of amber lye. The washpot was filled with lye which was set to boil, and literally "ate up" all the bones and meat scraps put into it. When this "miracle mush" cooled it was soft soap. We dipped it into a barrel and used it for washing dishes, washing clothes and washing people.

In dyeing cloth, bark of a hickory, persimmon or slippery elm tree was boiled and boiled to get the color out, then "brown domestic" for quilt backings was boiled and boiled in the solution to put the color in.

To render lard at hog-killing time, all the extra fat from the entrails was cooked in the washpot until the bits of fat turned into brittle cracklings which were separated from the liquid lard, and that was stored in ten-gallon tin cans for use during the year.

Boiling hams was fun time. When we had "dinner on the ground" at church or had a family reunion, two or three or four hams were boiled in the washpot for the occasions.

Fortunately, we never had to "take in washing" to get a loaf of bread, but judging from the philosophy in a poem by Paul Lawrence Dunbar, many pioneers other than midwesterners needed to:

It's easy 'nough to titter w'en
De stew is smokin' hot,
But hits mighty he'd to giggle
W'en dey's nuffin' in de pot.

Isn't this observation as true today as it was in pioneer times? Human needs and methods of fulfillment are links to our past.

Three Definitely A Crowd

DEAR ABBY: I am 26 and Bob is 27. We've been dating for over a year, and I am very much attracted to him, but I don't seem to be making any headway. You see, whenever we go out, Bob always brings another fellow along. We have never been absolutely alone — just the two of us.

I've become very much upset with having an extra man on all our dates, and I want to do something about it.

THREE IS A CROWD

DEAR THREE: A confrontation isn't necessary. If Bob were interested in a romantic involvement with you, you wouldn't have to insist on being alone with him. Three's a crowd. Lose him.

DEAR ABBY: My ex-wife and I often discuss remarrying, but we always get hung up on the question of money. Her net worth has grown substantially since our divorce, and mine has gone way down.

She feels that in a remarriage, her assets should remain hers as a sort of security, and that I should contribute the same as before.

I feel that if a couple marries, there should be a complete merger. In other words, since I was the sole source of support in our first marriage because I was "up," so to speak, financially, she would be the mainstay now that our situations are reversed. We are both in our 50s and semi-retired and have no dependents. What do you say?

FOULED UP IN FLA. DEAR FOULED: Your letters leaves too many questions unanswered. How long were you married? Why were you divorced? You say that her net worth has appreciated substantially since your divorce, and yours has gone "way down." Why? Did you gamble or make risky investments, or were you merely a victim of the times?

She may be justified in her concern about her "security," but knowing so few of the facts, I hesitate to offer any advice.

DEAR ABBY: Please explain in easy pool-hall language just what people mean when they say they are "born again" or "twice-born." Thank you.

Two Of Three Motorists Still Not Buckling Up

Detroit (AP) — Despite government efforts to force motorists to buckle up, only one out of three drivers of recent-model cars uses seat belts and fewer than one in four uses both lap and shoulder belts, according to a study by an auto insurance research group.

Results of the four-city study indicate safety-belt use has increased only slightly since 1970 in spite of design improvements in the belt systems and numerous warning devices put on cars since then.

The study was conducted by the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, a Washington-based nonprofit research and educational group supported by several insurance industry associations.

Researchers observed 28,530 drivers at 110 sites in metropolitan Baltimore, Detroit, Houston and Los Angeles during February and March of this year. The results were made public only recently.

The findings showed 23% of those driving 1974-1976 model cars were wearing both seat and shoulder belts and an additional 10% had just their seat belts buckled.

The federal government first required cars to be equipped with front seat belts in 1968. The automakers were ordered to add warning buzzers, flashing lights and shoulder belts in 1972.

A controversial interlock system, which prevented a car from starting until front-seat occupants buckled up, was put on 1974-model cars. However, Congress repealed the interlock regulation early in the 1975-model year because of widespread consumer complaints.

In addition, warning devices on newer-model cars shut off after a few seconds, even though belts are not buckled.

The latest study also reported that:

— 64% of drivers of 1974-model cars were wearing no belts.

— 77% of drivers of 1968-1973 model cars did not have their seat belts buckled.

Cavanaugh's Purpose Ignored As UNL Cuts 30 Jobs To Meet Budget

About 30 jobs have been eliminated at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln in the wake of a legislative cut of $500,000 from the fiscal 1976-77 budget.

According to campus officials, the controversial Unicameral budget amendment sponsored by Omaha Sen. John Cavanaugh has resulted in 26 persons being cut from the personnel roster and two slots remaining unfilled.

Cavanaugh wanted the cuts to come from the university systems operation, but over his objections, the NU Board of Regents also trimmed programs and services at the campus level.

"It's very disappointing," said UNL Chancellor Roy Young, who said he was not told about the $500,000 budget cut when he was recruited from Oregon for the chancellor's job.

"It's been very difficult to contend with," he said. "We went over each program with a great deal of care. While some of the cuts we made look rough, the alternatives were much worse."

Ken Bader, vice chancellor for student affairs, said the legislation was "well intended, but misdirected" because it would naturally overflow to the campus level.

"I don't think the real impact was known at the time," he said, adding that "if it (the cuts) all came from central administration, it would completely dismantle it."

Bader said the administration will request that funds for programs and services lopped off this year be replaced for 1977-78.

Although the campus would "get by the best it can," morale and frustration will be the biggest problems stemming from the cuts, he said.

These cuts, when added to voluntary cutbacks, are "the straw that broke the camel's back," Bader said.

Cavanaugh said the cuts were "absolutely not" his idea of what should have been done, but added that he did all he could to avoid it by twice appearing before the NU Board of Regents.

"They let me talk (and explain where cuts should be made)," he said, "but they just didn't listen."

Cavanaugh said the regents, using "pure politics," blindly and unquestioningly accepted the system's recommendation, and thus acted contrary to the intent of the measure.

Although Cavanaugh said the intent was primarily to reduce administrative overhead at the systems level, some of it was to be directed at the individual campuses.

Among the reductions to business and finance were: Power plant losses that include up to three electrical engineers at almost $120,000; postage amounting to almost $25,000; accounting positions at almost $25,000; nine custodial jobs at almost $73,000, and maintenance programs amounting to about $52,000.

Among academic program losses were: One of six academic advisers, saving almost $10,000; the "Help Line" informational telephone program at more than $14,000; and a half-time counseling position at almost $4,500.

Miles Tommerasen, vice chancellor for business and finance, said the losses came in spite of stringent spending policies in recent years.

"No longer can we cut horizontally," Bader said. "We have had to eliminate some programs that people have come to expect."

Tommerasen said, "The heck of it is that we have been struggling the past few years, cutting back and saving everywhere we could. Just wait until deans and directors start complaining that nobody ever sweeps out their offices. Or the snow comes and 65 people fall because we couldn't afford to clear the walks."

Tommerasen said oil consumption had been cut earlier by 33%.

Task Force To Examine Services For Retardates

By The Associated Press

A task force has been set up to look for ways to improve Nebraska's services for the mentally retarded.

The task force, created by the Governor's Committee on Mental Retardation, will be made up of five members.

Jack Cleavenger, director of the Department of Public Institutions and committee chairman, said he would announce appointments in the near future.

The task force was proposed Tuesday by Jerry Griepentrog, program director at the Beatrice State Development Center, formerly known as the Beatrice State Home.

Griepentrog said the task force should come up with concrete proposals to be acted upon by the committee and forwarded to Gov. J. J. Exon for possible legislative action.

His proposal came after committee members agreed they needed more information about the reorganization of the state's mental retardation services.

Cavanaugh's Purpose Ignored As UNL Cuts 30 Jobs To Meet Budget

About 30 jobs have been eliminated at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln in the wake of a legislative cut of $500,000 from the fiscal 1976-77 budget.

"No longer can we cut horizontally," Bader said. "We have had to eliminate some programs that people have come to expect."

Tommeraaen said, "The heck of it is that we have been struggling the past few years, cutting back and saving everywhere we could. Just wait until deans and directors start complaining that nobody ever sweeps out their offices. Or the snow comes and 65 people fall because we couldn't afford to clear the walks."

Tommeraaen said oil consumption had been cut earlier by 33%.

Task Force To Examine Services For Retardates

By The Associated Press

A task force has been set up to look for ways to improve Nebraska's services for the mentally retarded.

The task force, created by the Governor's Committee on Mental Retardation, will be made up of five members.

Jack Cleavenger, director of the Department of Public Institutions and committee chairman, said he would announce appointments in the near future.

Tuesday by Jerry Griepentrog, program director at the Beatrice State Development Center, formerly known as the Beatrice State Home.

Griepentrog said the task force should come up with concrete proposals to be acted upon by the committee and forwarded to Gov. J. J. Exon for possible legislative action.

His proposal came after committee members agreed they needed more information about the reorganization of the state's mental retardation services.

Los Angeles (UPI) — A clinic that diagnosed men as pregnant was ordered to improve its procedures.

The investigation began after seven students and an instructor at the California State University at Long Beach went to clinic and were diagnosed as pregnant, though none was.

Eight female undercover agents then went to the clinic, investigators said, including four who substituted male urine for their own and two who had undergone hysterectomies and could not possibly be pregnant. Two of the four male urine samples were diagnosed as coming from pregnant women.

Summer School Classes End Amid Concern Over High Cost

Summer school courses end this week for more than 4,000 Lincoln public school students, some of whom have participated in "first-time-ever" courses.

"Each year we think up things the kids will like, and each year they choose the same old things," said Associate Superintendent Ron Brandt.

The "same old things" include driver training and remedial courses in math and English.

New things include the Summer Arts Carousel, an intensive six-week course for kindergarten through third grade students, and the Lincoln Center School, a classroom downtown for 11-13 year olds.

Board of education member Pearl Goldenstein said she believes "students need exposure to a variety of things in the summer as well as remedial work." School administrators apparently agree, because course offerings range from conversational French to figure enhancement.

The Lincoln summer school program, one of few offered in the state, has drawn the board's attention because it is expensive.

Superintendent John Prash said that an attempt to provide 50% funding has failed because of the rising costs of materials and instruction, coupled with the fact that the number of students enrolling is hard to predict.

This year's summer school cost the schools $238,600, $30,000 more than was budgeted. The schools had estimated they would receive $87,000, or 41% of the total cost, but wound up taking in receipts of $106,723, or 44% of the total. Receipts come from state and federal reimbursement for programs as well as tuition.

Rousseau had the highest attendance among elementary schools — 337 youngsters enrolled. Park School had the fewest — eight students enrolled in the program for orthopedically handicapped children. Twenty-four students at Saratoga and 31 at Pershing used only one room to cut back costs, Brandt said.

Swimming was the most popular course for elementary students — 598 enrolled. Intermediate math attracted 270, primary reading 209.

Driver education was the most popular among secondary students, and 456 enrolled in the classes held at East High. Junior high math was taught to 128 students.
